A new resource for health care

Welcome to Northern Colorado M.D.

This publication is the most comprehensive local medical directory ever prepared, listing more than 1,000 of Northern Colorado's medical establishments and an even greater number of physicians.

It's designed as a companion piece to the Northern Colorado Health & Wellness Summit, taking place June 20, 2002, in Fort Collins.

Included in this publication are listings of medical clinics, hospitals, long-term-care facilities, medical-products manufacturers and much more. Listings provide a variety of information, such as name, address, phone and fax numbers, and, for many listings, expanded information on physicians and specialties.

But that's not all. Northern Colorado M.D. also includes articles designed to inform users about the vagaries of the health-care industry, examining the rising costs of care, access to health care and many other trends.

Directory offers insight, data

Future annual editions will find more articles, and even deeper data, designed to make health-care decisions easier for business owners and the general public.

Northern Colorado M.D. is distributed to every clinic listed in the directory, as well as to subscribers to The Northern Colorado Business Report. Other copies are distributed in bulk at local hospitals and clinics and sold at retail establishments.

Preparing a research endeavor of this complexity requires a great deal of assistance. We would first like to thank Poudre Valley Health System, the Poudre Health Services District, Longmont United Hospital, Platte Valley Medical Center and Banner Health System for providing us with a wealth of data that made our job easier.

Secondly, thank you to Dan Feiveson, Sharon Mellon, Jane Albritton and Kate Hawthorne for their research efforts.

And special thanks to our sales force, led in this project by Lee Porter, and our sponsor, Poudre Valley Health System.

Northern Colorado M.D. soon will be available online at datajoe.ncbr.com, our online database and story archives.

Keep in mind that any research project, especially a first-time effort, carries with it substantial risk of error and omission. If we mistakenly omitted your facility, or if your information is incorrect, please call (800) 440-3506 and let us know. Or use the form on page 79 of this edition, and fax it to us at (970) 221-5432.

And although this directory won't publish again for another year, corrections and additions will be made immediately to our online database.

Finally, we welcome your suggestions for changes or improvements to Northern Colorado M.D.

Enjoy!

Access to health care remains elusive

By Sue Lenthe

Uninsured risk higher rates of mortality

Northern Colorado M.D. Correspondent

Health-industry experts tie access to health care — more specifically, access to health insurance — to more than simply fewer cavities or better health habits.

Recent reports conclude that going without health insurance can have wide-reaching impacts on life, death, wages and even education.

The Kaiser Commission on Medicaid and the Uninsured concluded in its May 2002 report “Sicker and Poorer, The Consequences of being Uninsured” that going without health insurance can increase mortality rates by 10 percent to 15 percent and — conversely — that better health improves earning potential and educational attainment by 10 percent to 30 percent.

In Northern Colorado, access to health care has improved, due in part to an expanding safety net of clinics and ancillary programs aimed at meeting the needs of those who are uninsured or underinsured.

“Some people say that access to health care is good in our community,” said Carol Plock, director of Poudre Health Services District.

Fort Collins, Loveland and Greeley all have community health clinics that serve uninsured and underinsured individuals and families.

In Greeley, for example, a coalition of health-care providers and the Weld County Health Department is working to make sure those people get access to health care.

“Greeley and Weld County has a significant number of people who are in lower income levels and who don't have access to health care,” said Gene Haffner, spokesman for North Colorado Medical Center.

Haffner said the Monfort Children's Clinic, the NCMC Foundation and Sunrise Community Health Center are working together to help treat the uninsured and underinsured in Weld County.

Plock said such regional clinics have helped sign up hundreds of children with the state's health-insurance program for families with limited incomes. She also pointed to a healthy area hospital system, which won't turn away those in emergency situations.

“However, every day in our community, people are struggling with how they will afford prescriptions, basic medical care, dental care, mental-health care, specialist care, lab work and other health-care costs,” Plock said.

Employment experts frequently point out that such concerns distract workers, increasing stress levels while dampening productivity.

Bobbi Sutton, a social worker at McKee Medical Center in Loveland, helps people in need obtain free or low-cost prescriptions through the hospital's Prescription Assistance Program.

Tough choices

Some of the program's clients face tough choices when it comes to making limited incomes cover their needs. Sutton said most of the program's 92 clients are elderly and may have eight or more prescriptions. In Colorado, where the average retail prescription cost is about $45, that can mean hundreds of dollars for prescriptions alone each month.

In fact, Sutton said that within one six-month period, the prescription assistance program helped clients obtain prescription medications worth a total of $400,000.

Northern Coloradans who are under- or uninsured are typically the working poor or

“Every day in our community, people are struggling with how they will afford (health care).”

— Carol Plock, Poudre Health Services District

elderly, say human services workers. Their situation is made more precarious by swings in the economy.

In Colorado, 80 percent of the uninsured are employed, Plock said, “and those who are in jobs that don't pay high wages are at the most risk for access to health care.”

Plock said 5.8 percent of families with incomes 185 percent of the federal poverty level — $33,485 for a family of four — are uninsured. Of families whose incomes fall below that level, 23.1 percent are uninsured.

“The majority of the people who we serve at the House of Neighborly Service are people working in service-sector jobs,” said Gwen Stephenson, director. HNS works to meet emergency food, clothing and shelter needs in Loveland. “So, many times the hourly pay is low, and many companies have cut back to part-time so they're not paying insurance benefits.”

At the same time the region's economy was sliding over the past two years, health-insurance premiums were rocketing upward; swelling by 25 percent to 100 percent, a trend that is expected to continue.

In 1999, according to the Kaiser Family Foundation, the average annual cost of employer-based health insurance coverage for a family totaled $6,958, with employers picking up $5,261 of that and employees paying $1,697.

Plock voiced concern over the trend, noting that experts predict that employers staggering under the burden of rising premiums will pass the costs along to their employees. "Some may end up dropping health-insurance coverage altogether."

Plock said evidence of that backlash shows up in results of a survey the health district conducts every three years.

About 80 percent of respondents to surveys conducted in 1995, 1998 and 2001 reported that they could not afford insurance premiums. Meanwhile, 12.9 percent of the 1995 survey respondents reported they were uninsured because they had lost or changed jobs. In 2001, that figure doubled to 26 percent. In 1995, 8 percent of survey respondents said they were uninsured because their employer either didn't offer or had dropped coverage. In 2001, that

Many workers uninsured

In Colorado, according to the Colorado Coalition for the Medically Underinsured, construction workers are the most likely workers to be uninsured, with 33 percent of that population going without insurance in 1999. That is followed by personal services/entertainment workers at 29 percent uninsured; retail/wholesale trade workers, 21.8 percent uninsured; business/repair services workers, 16.3 percent uninsured; and mining/manufacturing, 15.8 percent uninsured.

Government workers were most likely to have health insurance with an uninsured rate of only 3.1 percent in 1999.

In Larimer and Weld counties, Plock quoted the 2001 Colorado Health Data Book's findings that 15 percent of adults were estimated to be without insurance.

The Poudre Health Services District refined that and other health-care access statistics through its survey. The 2001 survey found that 10.2 percent of health-district residents had no health insurance, 75.2 percent had been insured continuously the past three years and that 8.9 percent had been without health insurance for 13 or more months during the past three years.

The health district covers the northern two-thirds of Larimer County and excludes the Loveland/Berthoud area.

The rate of uninsured in the district rose slightly over 1998's 8.7 percent, but shows a drop from the 1995 figure by 13 percent. The number of people who went without insurance for 13 months over the previous three years has shown steady improvement: 10.7 percent reported that situation on the 1998 survey, 14.8 percent on the 1995 survey.

While the survey shows that access to health insurance has improved slightly over the years, Plock isn't convinced the issue has been put to rest in Northern Colorado. "The fact that 10 percent of our population is without health insurance now and that 25 percent have been without health insurance at some time over the past three years is still very troubling."

Three hospitals and other centers provide spectrum of care

By Diane Freeman

Northern Colorado M.D. Correspondent

Several major hospitals and medical centers serve Northern Colorado, and some plan expansions to meet the needs of a growing population.

In Greeley, North Colorado Medical Center recently broke ground for a new emergency room on the hospital's main campus. The $13 million project is scheduled for completion by the end of summer and will triple the size of the existing space.

"Last year, we had 43,000 visits to the emergency room," said spokesman Gene Haffner. That number has about doubled since the facility was built in 1975.

The hospital also is in the process of finalizing a master facility plan expansion project that will cost about $110 million and create another four-story tower on the hospital's main campus, he said. Currently, the facility has 326 patient beds.

The medical center features a burn unit, the only one in Colorado north of Denver. "There are only two or three burn units in the state. Ours has four beds," he said. Dr. Pam Howard, a certified burn surgeon, is medical director of the unit.

The hospital has 1,800 employees with 250 physicians on the medical staff.

It also is served by AirLife of Greeley, the only helicopter medical transportation in the state north of Denver. The service began 20 years ago, Haffner said.

The hospital began in 1904 as Greeley Hospital. Then, in 1952, the Weld County General Hospital was constructed. An addition was erected in 1975, along with a new emergency room.

Private status in 1996

In 1996, the hospital was incorporated as a not-for-profit private hospital and discontinued its mill-levy tax support. "We became a private, independent, not-for-profit hospital with no tax support," Haffner said.

An expansion was added to the hospital in 1992, adding more patient beds. In 1995, the medical center became affiliated with what is now known as Banner Health System.

In 1996, the hospital constructed and opened an outpatient diagnostic center and medical office on its main campus.

In summer 2001, a new ambulatory surgery center was added at a new campus site at 20th Street and 71st Avenue in Greeley. "All our patient day surgeries are performed there now," he said.

In Fort Collins, Poudre Valley Hospital is considering constructing another building in or near Fort Collins to meet the demands of the community's growing population.

"Most of the growth is occurring in south and southeast Fort Collins and neighboring communities. People prefer a convenient location for a hospital," said hospital spokesman Armi Hall.

This year, the hospital is completing a major construction project. It already has opened several new nursing units, most with private patient rooms. By the end of this summer, construction will be completed, and several nursing units will have been remodeled. These include women's care, orthopedics, and a surgical nursing unit, Hall said.

Poudre Valley Hospital is one of the largest hospitals in the region with 235 patient beds. It also has 46 beds at Mountain Crest Mental Health facility, a separate center in Fort Collins that the hospital bought a few years ago.

PVH regional centers

The hospital also operates four regional centers in Fort Collins as part of the hospital. These include the Heart Center of the Rockies for cardiac services; Regional Orthopedic Center; Regional Trauma Center; and Regional Neurosciences Center, which includes both neurology and neurosurgery.

Most of these facilities are located in the hospital building itself, Hall said.

Some 391 physicians are affiliated with the hospital and another 169 health professionals — psychologists and others — are also allied with it, he said. The hospital has 1,643 employees.

In 2001, Poudre Valley Hospital discharged 15,091 patients. The hospital's emergency room recorded 41,934 visits last year, with another 6,519 ambulance patients delivered, Hall said.

Also located in Fort Collins is the Orthopaedic Center of the Rockies, an outpatient surgery and recovery center.

Spokeswoman Pam Brock said the recovery center has 10 private rooms for patients who may stay from one to three nights after surgery.

Not all patients need to stay beyond the surgery itself, she said. "A lot of it is doctor preference. They may want to observe the patient for more than a few hours."

Especially on procedures such as ACL repairs, the physician may prefer to watch the patient for the initial few hours after surgery and then acquaint the patient with exercises for recovery.

"They can stay overnight and get their educational piece done and start rehab," she said.

Often, patients recovering from open shoulder surgery may stay that so the physician can determine that the patient is stable before returning home, Brock said.

The center handles all kinds of orthopedic surgeries, including hand extremities, joint replacements, fine surgery, orthopedic spine, foot and ankle, knee, shoulder and sports medicine, she said.

A total of 19 physicians are affiliated with the center. Two are not surgeons, and one is a podiatrist. The facility employs 170 people and has locations in Fort Collins, Loveland and Windsor.

"We have plans to look at other locations in the future," Brock said.

The center is physician-owned and was started in 1969. "They built this facility in Fort Collins with the surgery center in 1990. The recovery center was added in 1999," she said.

The facility makes it easy for the patient to meet all of his or her needs at one location. "The patient can really come and in and have everything done here – his lab work, X-rays, pre-op testing," she said.

Additionally, there is an MRI center located just across the parking lot. Then the surgery and recovery are done at the center, Brock said.

McKee Medical Center

McKee Medical Center in Loveland opened a holistic facility a year ago with an acupuncturist, massage therapist and herbologist on staff.

"We offer a lot of different services. What's somewhat unique is our Center for Holistic Medicine. Both Western and Eastern medical models are used," said Jamie Eubank, hospital spokeswoman.

"They're good at exploring different options to benefit the patient," Eubank said. The Holistic Center is a very general treatment center for all types of illnesses and disorders.

McKee will open a new cancer center in September. It will be part of the physical layout of the current facility and features an all-inclusive model with doctors housed there, chemotherapy and radiation done on site.

"It will be just a treatment center with no in-patient beds," she said.

The largest hospital in the Loveland area, McKee Medical Center started out more than 25 years ago as Loveland Community Hospital. In 2000, it admitted 5,778 patients. The center has 108 patient beds.

The hospital now has about 230 physicians affiliated with it and 854 employees. McKee Medical Center has the only emergency room in Loveland.

The hospital is part of Banner Health Systems, a non-church affiliated, not-for-profit system based in Phoenix. Banner Health Systems operates hospitals in 14 states, with more than 25,000 staff members.

In Colorado, the company also operates North Colorado Medical Center, Sterling Regional Medical Center and the East Morgan

Many factors cause rising health-care costs

By Barbara Maynard

Aging population, consumer demand among reasons for hikes

Northern Colorado M.D. Correspondent

Opening an insurance bill has become a crash course in the rising costs of health care. While the impact on consumer wallets is easy to comprehend, the tangle of factors accounting for the latest price surge is not.

Prescription drugs, an aging population and consumer demand account for a large percentage of recent increases. However, insurers and the insured alike also share some of the blame.

"The data that we typically go by show that about 34 percent of health-care costs right now are associated with prescription drugs," said Kevin Unger, vice president of planning and strategic development for Poudre Valley Hospital in Fort Collins. "Another large percentage, about 23 percent, is due to utilization — people are expecting a higher level of service. They are spending more on health care, so they are expecting more."

Pharmaceuticals drive costs up through several mechanisms. "Direct-to-customer advertising of drugs that are still under patent, new drugs for conditions for which there was no product 10 years ago — Viagra, for instance — and an aging population taking more drugs," all contribute to the increased expenditure on prescription drugs, said Dr. Adrienne LeBailly, director of the Larimer County Department of Health and Environment.

New technologies

New technologies also cost money. "Total knee replacements that last 20 years when they used to only last 10 years are wonderful, but they are also expensive," said Pam Brock, director of communications and marketing for Orthopaedic Center of the Rockies.

Demand for expensive drugs and technologies is fueled by baby boomers creeping past middle age. With an aging population, we have "more older people who tend to be sicker than younger people," LeBailly said.

New drugs and technologies have been accompanied by growing consumer demand for services, but not by a realization of the true costs. "People are not necessarily ready to take (financial) responsibility for their own health care. Insurance costs are increasing, and costs have to go somewhere," Brock said. "I really believe that the patients end up suffering more than anyone because they aren't informed enough about their responsibilities."

Preventive-care programs can help contain costs, but employers struggling to pay for basic health insurance don't have extra money to invest in preventive care for employees, noted Chet Seward, program director of the Colorado Coalition for the Medically Underserved.

Seward cited a recent study by the Pennsylvania Health Care Cost Containment Council. The study found that health-maintenance organizations that provided comprehensive preventive care — programs such as reminding diabetic patients to get regular check-ups — had lower hospitalization costs.

"If you offer good quality medical care in a timely and efficient way, you're going to save money," he said. "The concept of prevention works." However, the current system isn't designed to reward preventive care.

Personal responsibility lacking

Personal responsibility, or lack thereof, also contributes to costs.

"The expectation that if something is wrong, that either a pill or a procedure can fix it is part of why things are very expensive," said Carl Smith, director of managed care for PVH. "For example, if you have a heart-disease patient who is non-compliant with all the things they know need to be done, and then ends up in the emergency room, then when the time comes to receive medical care, then yes, it's going to be very expensive."

Considering the role of personal responsibility brings up difficult questions that society must confront in any debate of health-care reform.

"If somebody refuses to put on a seatbelt, or drives drunk, do they get the same services when they get to the health system?" Smith said. "So far, society has said we will pick up the cost."

Because health insurance is based on the rule of large numbers, efforts to skim healthy people into a lower-cost insurance pool make insurance prohibitively expensive for the remaining consumers, Smith said.

The cost of insurance premiums raises additional issues over the cost of health care per se. For example, Poudre Valley Hospital is less pricey than other hospitals in the state, but its nonprofit philosophy can make it more expensive to insurance companies.

In a comparison of hospitals across the state,

Unger said the average cost of hospitalization in Denver-area hospitals was $4,748 per day. In other urban areas comparable to Fort Collins, such as Boulder, Longmont, Colorado Springs and Loveland, the per day average was $2,914. Poudre Valley Hospital compared favorably, with a daily average of $2,630.

"Poudre Valley Hospital is a community hospital. We are not for profit," Smith said. "Our objective is to stay in business. We want to provide health care to the community, so we have attempted to keep charges as low as possible. We don't offer large discounts to the managed-care companies, so that there is not a substantial penalty to someone who walks in off the street without insurance."

Then there's also the cost of staffing a hospital. Gene Haffner, spokesman for North Colorado Medical Center in Greeley, said hospitals must pay a competitive salary to attract good people.

"The labor market requires us to remain competitive, so a competitive salary and benefits contributes to (higher health care costs)."

Insurance firms play catch-up

Insurance companies are also catching up for past losses, Unger said. In attempts to compete for business, some insurers offered low rates for generous benefits, and did not meet their costs. Now, rates are climbing as insurers try to make up for past underestimates.

Brock and Seward both pointed out the misperception that doctors are getting rich off of raising rates. Not only do malpractice suits continue to raise costs for doctors, but some doctors are losing money in the current health-care climate.

"Physicians at the Orthopaedic Center feel (the increased costs) as much as anyone else does," Brock said. "So they're always trying to control costs even in terms of how they run their offices. For example, electronic filing is less expensive, in terms of time and paper."

With the myriad of competing forces pulling on the health-care system, answers won't come easily.

"I think the rising cost of health care and the rising level of 'uninsurance' throughout the state is a question and an issue that folks up in Fort Collins and all across Colorado have to grapple with because it's not going to get any better any time soon," Seward said. "It's going to take societal demand for change. When that happens, we will see some change."

MSAs allow savings for health costs

Savings accounts available since 1997 for some workers

---

Sue Lenthe

Northern Colorado M.D. Correspondent

MSAs, or Medical Savings Accounts, make it possible for people who are self-employed or employed by small businesses with 50 or fewer employees to save money toward medical expenses in tax-exempt trusts or custodial accounts.

They can use the money for health-care expenses such as insurance deductibles, eyeglasses and dental-care services. MSA contributions are tax-deductible, eligible withdrawals from the accounts are tax-free, and earnings are tax-deferred. In addition, contributions can be rolled over from year to year, retaining tax-favored status.

MSAs must be established in conjunction with a high-deductible health plan. A high-deductible health plan, according to the Internal Revenue Service, has a deductible of $1,500 to $2,250 for an individual or $3,000

By to $4,500 for a family, with out-of-pocket expenses not to exceed $3,000 annually for an individual or $5,500 for a family.

Medical savings accounts are established with qualified MSA trustees or custodians, which typically include banks and insurance companies. Institutions already approved by the IRS to be trustees or custodians of individual retirement accounts are automatically approved to be MSA trustees or custodians.

Once established, either the employer, employee or self-employed individual can contribute to the account. The maximum annual contribution is 65 percent of the deductible amount on an individual high-deductible insurance policy or 75 percent of the high-deductible family coverage.

Those contributions, then, are deducted when computing gross income for tax purposes.

MSAs resemble individual retirement accounts in that many of the same rules apply. For example, just like an IRA, an MSA account is considered portable. If an employee leaves the work force or changes jobs, the MSA stays with that individual, not the former employer.

The federal government added the MSA mechanism to the Internal Revenue Code in 1996 as part of the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act. MSAs became available as part of a pilot project Jan. 1, 1997.

At the time, the government set a cap allowing no more than 700,000 MSAs to be set up. That cap has since been removed. "But they weren't anywhere close to it anyway," said Susan Gambrill, special assistant to the commissioner of the Colorado Division of Insurance.

"We haven't had a big run on the bank with MSAs for several reasons," Gambrill said. Among those reasons: The broad list of qualified medical services the federal government allows MSA savings to be spent for does not always match those allowed by high-deductible health plans. Thus, consumers may think they are accruing expenses toward their deductible and later find that was not the case.

In addition, the concept of paying the first $1,500 out of pocket simply doesn't appeal to a lot of people, Gambrill said. In the booming economy of recent years, such a health benefit wasn't likely to attract employees.

The theory behind MSAs was that if consumers had to pay the first $1,500 or more out of pocket for medical expenses, they would be more careful about their expenditures. But the reality is quite different. "We've got all this managed care with $10

Self insurance offers lower-cost option

Aging population, consumer demand among reasons for hikes

By Diane Freeman

Some large organizations are opting for self-insured health care because they can come out ahead financially with self-insurance instead of separate coverage.

Poudre School District has offered partially self-funded health and dental coverage since the mid-1980s, said Kristin Bennett, the district's benefits manager. About 3,000 full-time employees are eligible for the coverage, she said.

Within the self-insured program, the district offers an EPO or Exclusive Provider Organization — much like an HMO managed-care plan — and a preferred-provider plan.

Bennett said the school district has asked for bids from full insurance carriers in the past, but the self-funded plan has always been able to beat their numbers. "It's always been a better deal," she said.

Because of the large population within the group, the self-funded plan works well, she said.

Originally, the plan was set up with a reserve as protection in case the district was hit hard by a claim. "We fund the plan through contributions," she said.

A third-party administrator supervises it and adjudicates the claims out of the fund. "We don't want to be in that business," Bennett said. A reinsurance carrier backs up the fund in case claims go over the total amount in the fund, she said.

One year, there were several people with large claims, and the fund fell short. Money from another fund within the school district was allocated to cover it, she said.

"It's never been beneficial for us to go fully insured or join other districts because of our population. It's not a win-win for us. We don't have enough high claims," she said.

Another benefit of self-funding is that the school district contracts directly with local hospitals and physician groups to obtain better pricing, she said.

The benefits themselves are comparable to those of other school districts and private industry. Premiums are in the mid-range, she said.

The school district also offers a voluntary vision plan that is administered completely through a third party.

Larimer County offers a self-insured dental plan to its employees, said county spokeswoman Pam Stultz.

Insurance program helps those injured on the job

Kathy Hayes
Northern Colorado M.D. Correspondent

Most people probably know that workers' compensation insurance covers the cost of medical care for an employee who is injured in a work-related activity. And they may also know that the insurance compensates employees for wages lost because of a work-related illness or injury.

But what many may not realize is that workers' compensation is much more than insurance coverage that Colorado employers are required to carry. The workers' compensation system, with its thousands of players, is like a well-choreographed production: Every player, on stage and behind the scenes, works in concert to provide effective treatment, clear communication with all parties involved, and safety education and other strategies aimed at containing costs.

The Colorado Division of Workers' Compensation administers the program and

By works with employers, employees, insurance companies, medical providers and the general public. One of its primary responsibilities is to provide reliable, up-to-date information to help people better understand workers' compensation and to help employers comply with the requirements of the Workers' Compensation Act.

Through the Division, employers and employees can learn more about employers' obligations under the law, injured workers' rights and obligations and the process for filing a claim.

Employers may purchase workers' compensation insurance from any of the state's 200-plus private insurance companies authorized to conduct business in Colorado. A large company that meets specific workers' compensation requirements may be self-insured.

Insurance companies and coordinators of self-insured plans work with the Division, the employer, the employee and medical providers to ensure that injured workers receive immediate, aggressive and effective treatment that allows the employee to return to work more quickly.

"Employers have the right to designate who will treat their injured workers," said JoAnn Ibarra, special assistant to the director with the Division of Workers' Compensation. Many employers select medical or occupational health-care providers that deal exclusively with workers' comp cases.

"The goals of an occupational health-care provider are to provide quality care, rapid treatment and detailed information to the employer and employee about modified duty, if needed, so the employee can get back to work as soon as possible," said Claudia O'Leary, clinic administrator and office manager with Concentra Medical Centers.

It's also important, Ibarra noted, that employers choose a provider that will give injured workers a sense of confidence about their treatment and getting back to work with the minimum amount of lost time and impairment. "Then, both sides win," she said.

Medical providers, insurance-company representatives and the Division all play a role in helping employers to create a safe working environment. On-site safety seminars, wellness programs and risk assessments by qualified personnel can lead to safer workplaces and procedures that also minimize risk.

The Division rewards employers' injury-prevention strategies with a Premium Cost Containment Certification when employers conform to specified safety standards.

Make long-term care decisions early

Waiting until the last minute can create unnecessary crisis

By Sue Lenthe

Northern Colorado M.D. Correspondent

Negotiating the wide variety of options for long-term care doesn't have to be a sudden crisis, particularly if people don't put off making those decisions.

Communication and information can help ease fear surrounding the decision-making process when it's time to make choices about long-term care, said Yvonne Myers, community relations manager for Columbine Health Systems. "There are lots of resources out there that can help people."

Long-term care in Northern Colorado represents a wide range of choices and settings. Some people stay at home, hiring home-care services to help. That might mean having nursing assistants, nurses and therapists visit on a regular basis.

At the other end of the spectrum are skilled nursing facilities, or nursing homes, where patients receive nursing care 24 hours a day.

In between are independent-living and assisted-living settings, each focused on helping elderly people maintain their autonomy for as long as possible.

"The independent living that we provide in Good Samaritan offers no care, but meals, laundry and housekeeping services. You don't have to put out the trash anymore, but you are still in charge of medication, you bathe yourself. You're still making appointments and managing that," Myers said.

Independent-living settings offer security, convenience and socializing opportunities.

Assisted living represents the next level of care in the long-term care spectrum. The main difference is that assisted-living facilities are staffed with care providers 24 hours a day. These providers can help with medications and some mobility issues.

"What brings a person to assisted living is managing their medications and meals," Myers said. Assisted-living residents don't have major medical issues. They might use wheelchairs, but can lift themselves in and out of the wheelchair independently. "But you might be 85 years old, where something could suddenly happen to you quickly because of your age."

In either setting — independent or assisted living — residents can typically hire nurses or other caregivers to boost the level of care they receive.

People who need to be lifted, those who are incontinent or those with major medical issues aren't candidates for assisted-living facilities.

Incontinence is a typical indicator, Myers said. "It pretty much travels that by the time you are not able to maintain your bowel continence, you have other medical things going on and you really do need the nursing home."

Myers urges families facing long-term care decisions to respond proactively. "I think because we hope we don't have to do it, most of the decisions made to move someone to a facility are done when it's a crisis."

Working out the options beforehand offers people the luxury of touring the various facilities, meeting with staff, exploring amenities and making informed decisions.

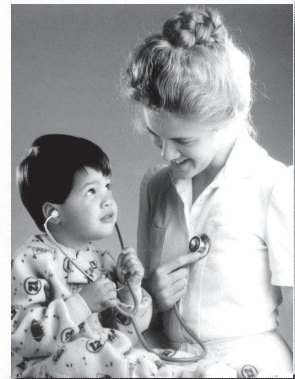

The ultimate scenario would be that at age 75 everyone would go out and pick the facility they wanted. "We're starting to see more of this. Baby boomers are aging, they're figuring it out," Myers said.

Hospice helps make final days easier

Three organizations provide care in Larimer, Weld counties

---

By Barbara Maynard

Northern Colorado M.D. Correspondent

Dealing with terminal illness is difficult for both patients and family members. Fortunately, several local services are available to help ease the pain.

Hospice of Larimer County and Hospice and Palliative Care of Northern Colorado are nonprofit organizations serving Larimer and Weld counties, respectively. Heartland Hospice is a private company that also serves both counties.

All three organizations focus on physical and emotional care. "We're there to make people as comfortable as possible, to manage pain and to provide emotional support," said Michele Meyer, marketing manager for Hospice of Larimer County.

Services range from medications for pain and symptom management to counseling, therapeutic touch, help running errands, and music and pet therapy.

"The only requirement to become a hospice patient is that an individual has a hospice-appropriate diagnosis," said Aimee Freeland, human-resources coordinator for Hospice and Palliative Care of Northern Colorado.

Typically, this is a physician's diagnosis that a person has less than six months to live. However, some patients live several years under hospice care, she said.

Most insurance plans, including Medicare and Medicaid, include hospice benefits.

Both local nonprofit hospices accept patients regardless of ability to pay, so they rely on fundraisers and private donations to help meet their costs.

"Being a nonprofit allows us to put care of patients first," Meyer said. "We don't have to make business decisions." For example, Hospice of Larimer County does not charge for any counseling services.

"We offer grief support and counseling to anyone in the county," Meyer said. "If my grandmother in Oklahoma died, I can come to hospice for counseling. If I'm a teenager and I have a friend who committed suicide, I can come to hospice. That's unique, but it has always been a big part of this hospice."

In 2001, Hospice of Larimer County served 565 hospice patients and counseled over 3,000 people, including patients.

Both non-profit hospices have unique care centers in hospitals that allow acute patients to live in a comfortable setting. Private rooms with homey decor include sleeper beds for family members and all hospice services, which encompass just about anything a patient requires to live out his or her last days fully.

"We even had a miniature horse up there once. We had a patient who had been a rodeo guy for years," Freeland said. When his friends heard that he missed his horses, they arranged to bring a miniature horse into the care center for a visit. "The gentleman was thrilled!"

The facilities include five private rooms at McKee Medical Center in Loveland and 10 rooms at North Colorado Medical Center in Greeley. Another facility is at Columbine Care Center West in Fort Collins.

Heartland serves seven hospice patients, while Hospice of Larimer County has more than 100, and Hospice and Palliative Care of Northern Colorado serves an average of 75.

Demand for hospice services is growing.

"We're there to make people as comfortable as possible, to manage pain and to provide emotional support."

— Michele Meyer, Hospice of Larimer County

Hospice of Larimer County doubled its patient load and staff in the last year. Meyer attributes the growth to national and local education efforts about hospice services, and the increased range of services that they are able to offer.

"There are so many myths and misconceptions about what hospice is," Freeland said. "We help people at so many different levels. We had a father and son who hadn't talked in 20 years, so we tried to make that happen. We try to make those things happen."

Employee wellness programs provide healthy returns

By Kathy Hayes

Northern Colorado M.D. Correspondent

Four years ago, Dave Marvin, president of Wind2 Software Inc., read an article on employee wellness programs and thought to himself, "This is a really good idea." He began developing a company-supported exercise program for his 60-plus employees, then kicked it off Jan. 1, 1998.

When employees met specific quotas for time spent walking, running, bicycling, lifting weights, or doing aerobics, he would reward them with paid time off.

"The positive effects of exercise are well-documented," Marvin said. "They include reduced stress levels and greater coping abilities, weight control, positive attitude, greater confidence and well-being, better sleep patterns and more."

Marvin also discovered that when employees exercise regularly, the overall well-being of the organization improves.

Marvin said he now often sees two or three employees walking together at lunchtime, something he'd never seen prior to the wellness program. "Besides getting healthier, people are bonding and doing teamwork on those walks," he said. The program has 75 percent employee participation.

Cherrilyn Wallace, human resources coordinator for Poudre Health Services District, also emphasizes the returns that employee wellness programs provide to employers. "These programs are designed to reduce employees' health-care costs, increase productivity, reduce absenteeism, enhance morale, and attract and retain employees," she said.

The program Wallace designed for the health district includes cholesterol screening, blood-pressure checks, smoking-cessation counseling, nutrition and activity counseling, educational programs and adult immunizations.

Most of the wellness services are provided internally by health-district staff. Participating individuals earn "Poudre Health Employee Dollars," which can be applied toward gift certificates.

The components and logistics of an employee wellness program may vary from one employer to the next, but the reason employers support them is the same: Their investment in employee health provides excellent returns to everyone involved. When employees practice risk prevention and take measures to improve their overall health, the organization saves on worker's compensation claims, as well as paid time off and lost productivity due to sickness or injury.

Marvin said people just seem happier when they exercise — and have the support of their employer to do so. To further encourage employees, he distributes a companywide monthly report summarizing the hours and activities that individuals — and the entire company — invested in exercise.

The more holistic approach that the health district takes toward employee wellness even includes wellness-related classes, such as how to choose the right athletic shoes, stretches to do before and after exercising, and ways to cook healthier meals.

"We're trying to position the health district as an organization that creates a model for wellness programs," Wallace said.

Insurance Glossary and Facts

Prepared by Polly Anderson, Poudre Health Services District

Glossary of Terms

Business Group of One (BG1) — Classification of sole proprietors (or a sole employee of an organization or domestic employee working more than 24 hours) for the purpose of purchasing policies in the small business market.

COBRA — Allows employees to retain their employer-based health insurance coverage up to 18 months after employment termination at up to 105% of policy cost (a provision of the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985). Available to businesses of 20 or more (there are state continuation laws that cover smaller groups).

Coinurance — Patient pays a fixed percentage of medical bills, typically 20%. Generally associated with indemnity plans (PPOs).

Co-payments — Flat, per visit fee paid by patient. General associated with HMO plans.

Deductibles — Patient pays the first part of medical bill(s) up to a defined point at which point coinsurance applies.

Defined Benefit/Defined Contribution Plans — Employers have traditionally purchased a specific set of benefits for their employees (defined benefit plans). With rising premiums, some employers are now giving employees a choice of plans with varied coverage, co-payments, deductibles and costs and contributing a set amount to the employee's policy (defined contribution).

Fee for service — The common provider reimbursement method prior to managed care (provider receives fee for each service provided)

Managed Care — A plan that requires (HMO) or incents (PPO) people to use a network of providers (unlike an indemnity plan which typically allows beneficiaries to visit any provider). Can be a health maintenance organization (HMO), a preferred provider organization (PPO) or a point of service (POS) plan.

Medical Savings Accounts — MSAs allow individuals to set aside tax-deductible savings to pay for medical bills. Federal law requires that MSAs be associated with qualifying catastrophic policies.

Network Adequacy — Colorado law requires that carriers maintain a sufficient network of providers to assure that covered benefits are reasonably accessible to covered persons.

Portability — The ability of a currently insured person (or insured within last 90 days) to continue health insurance coverage without being subject to pre-existing conditions exclusions. In Colorado, the following rules apply to exclusions:

Group insurance — may exclude pre-existing for 6 months if no prior coverage (not maternity)

Individual — may exclude pre-existing for 12 months or permanently if attached to policy when written (as a rider)

Rating

Community rating — Everyone in a particular area is charged the same rate

Experience rating — Rating based on claims experience or health status

Modified community rating — Variation on community rating (limited adjustments for age, geographic location and family composition allowed under CO law)

Rate banding — Rate variation (within limits) based on health status or other factors

Safety net providers — Healthcare providers that give service regardless of ability to pay (typically hospitals, community health centers and clinics)

Self-Funded Insurance — In self-funded insurance, employers assume the risk (all or part) of insuring their employees. An insurance company or other third-party administrator generally administers these plans. These plans are exempt from state insurance laws. From an employer's perspective, self-funding allows:

- Avoidance of administrative charges
- Exemption from state mandated coverage
- Exemption from state premium taxes
- Companies with employees in multiple states to offer the same plan to every employee

Local Insurance Coverage<sup>1</sup>

Type of insurance coverage	Percentage
Commercial	82
Medicare	7
Medicaid	2
None	10

Where Do Most People Get Their Insurance Coverage?<sup>2</sup>

	Colorado #	Colorado %	US #	US %
Employer	2,614,350	65	158,527,170	58
Individual	208,880	5	12,983,140	5

Uninsured	632,910	16	42,553,620	16
Total	4,011,170	100	273,309,560	100

Insurance Status Affects Health

- The uninsured have more difficulty accessing the health care system<sup>3</sup>, are more likely to postpone or delay care<sup>4</sup> and are less likely to receive important preventive care services.<sup>5</sup>

■ The uninsured have higher rates of preventable hospitalization<sup>6</sup>, receive lower quality care<sup>7</sup> and experience more adverse health outcomes, including higher death rates.<sup>8</sup>

Why Insure for Health?

Health insurance:

- Covers unforeseeable catastrophic health events (unpredictable for the insured; predictable for the insurer)
- Reduces the financial vulnerability of individuals and groups by spreading the risk
- Finances the healthcare “system”

A Brief History of the American Health Insurance “System”

According to the Access Project<sup>9</sup>, most countries use insurance to finance healthcare, but the United States is unusual in that it relies primarily on a voluntary, employment-based system instead of mandatory social insurance. The system began, in part, during the Depression as a prepayment program to bolster ailing hospitals and eventually physician practices.

Insurance became employment based with the wage and price controls imposed during WWII. With wage freezes, employers used health insurance to lure workers into unfilled positions. After the war, unions continued the fight for health insurance coverage and the practice grew with the passage of federal tax policies allowing businesses to claim premiums as business expenses and employees to receive insurance as a tax-free benefit.

Problems With the American System of Insuring for Health

- Insurance isolates consumers from the real costs of healthcare (moral hazard)
- Avoiding risk is profitable for carriers (underwriting)
- People want insurance coverage when they’re sick (adverse selection)
- Commercial insurance carrier overhead varies from 10-30% compared to less than 5% for Medicare<sup>10</sup>
- Decisions made by healthcare providers are influenced by carrier coverage and reimbursement, consumer demand and litigation avoidance
- Large groups can negotiate better rates than small groups
- Many people have problems accessing and affording health insurance in our current system, especially:
  - Small businesses and the self employed
  - Part-time and contract workers
  - Low/moderate income individuals

Market Segmentation

Market Rating practices	Exclusions	Mandated coverage
Large group (51+)	Carriers rate on each group’s experience May exclude pre-existing for 6 months if no prior coverage (except maternity) All policies must include coverage for newborns, child immunization, congenital defect therapies, pregnancy and childbirth complications, low-dose mammography, dependent children, adopted children, prostate cancer screening, child health supervision services (immunizations), dental anesthesia for kids, diabetes and prosthetics. Group must also cover maternity

Group policies (large and small) must also include maternity, mental illness and biologically based mental illness coverage.

Small group (1 – 50)

Modified community rating — rating based on all small groups insured by carrier except may adjust rate for age and geography May exclude pre-existing for 6 months if no prior coverage (except maternity)

Individual market May rate on health status

No guarantee issue (may refuse to underwrite)

No guarantee renewal (don’t have to renew contract if they don’t like your claims experience) May exclude pre-existing conditions for 12 months or attach rider to policy at time of issue to permanently exclude All mandates listed above except maternity and mental illness

Who Governs the Market?

Government is involved in regulating:<sup>11</sup>

1. Access (help buyers into the market)
2. Solvency (keep sellers in the market)
3. Stability (make sure there will be a market)
4. Transparency (show what’s in the market)
5. Standards (define what can be sold)
6. Pools (define who sells to whom)

About a third of insured Coloradans have policies governed by the Division of Insurance, part of the Colorado Division of Regulatory Agencies. The policies of the other two-thirds of insured Coloradans are exempt from state regulation because they are enrolled in Medicaid, Medicare, CHP, federal employee plans or in a self-funded plan. [ERISA – the federal Employment Retirement Income Security Act – exempts self-funded plans from state law.]

The following federal laws do govern all health coverage:

- HMO Act 1973
- ERISA 1974
- OBRA 1990 (Medigap)
- COBRA
- HIPAA 1996
- Mental health parity laws (1996 and 1998)
- Minimum maternity stays and breast reconstruction for post-mastectomy patients

Insurance Reform in the 1990s

Prior to the state level insurance reforms enacted in the 1990s, consumers experienced problems with coverage exemptions for pre-existing conditions, rising rates due to adverse claims experiences and coverage denial due to lifestyle. Reform in Colorado included:

Reform Purpose/Notes

Guaranteed renewal Ensures that individuals or businesses that meet appropriate criteria aren't denied renewal, regardless of group health status

Guaranteed issue Ensures that individuals or businesses that meet appropriate criteria could obtain coverage from insurers

Modified community rating Ensures that all policy holders within certain defined groups are charged the same rate, eliminates health status as a rating criteria

In the group market, age and geographic location may be used in rate setting

Portability Prevents denial of coverage for previously insured individuals with pre-existing conditions

Business group of one Allowing sole proprietors (and sole employees and domestic employees) to purchase insurance in the small business group market (with limited enrollment periods)

Network adequacy Requires all PPO & HMO plans to maintain a network sufficient in provider numbers and types to assure that covered benefits are accessible without unreasonable delay

Additional reforms added certain medical conditions and preventive screenings to a list of state mandated coverage. Unlike other reforms addressing affordability and availability, mandates were intended to guarantee a certain level of coverage and to prevent under-insurance.

www.orthohealth.com

Orthopaedics is the diagnosis and treatment of bone, joint, tendon and nerve disorders of the back, limbs and neck. It's the medicine of motion.

On the job, motion sometimes causes injury. Early diagnosis and treatment of work-related injuries, helps both the employee and employer.

When someone gets hurt at work, contact your occupational health care provider and ask for a referral to Orthopaedic Center of the Rockies. We'll diagnose the problem and work to correct it as quickly—and as cost-effectively—as possible. We know getting employees back on the job is a big concern.

DataJoe Saves the Day...

I just finished my double latte when the phone rang. It was Waldo from uptown. Said he had a deal going down, and needed me to give him the scoop on a company in the neighborhood.

I checked my files and dug up the exact info he needed to move forward. In his eyes, I found a gold mine. Turns out I made him look as good as a shiny five dollar bill, and he told me my services were worth every penny.

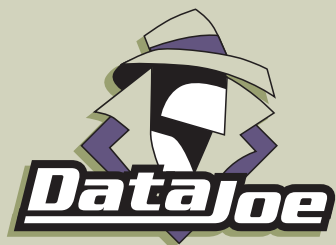

I told him I was just doing my job, because that's what I do. It's my job.

Put DataJoe to work for you, too. Hire him by the day, month, or year at www.datajoe.ncbr.com.

Tell him Waldo sent you.
