Time is precious. That's why we don't waste a lot of yours in our ER.

At McKee Medical Center, we work to get you the advanced emergency care you need in 30 minutes or less, so you can get on with your life. This timely care is possible because our ER is divided into different severity zones to help reduce waiting. Plus our highly skilled physicians and nurses work together during the initial consultation so patients don't have to restate their medical condition. It's this kind of teamwork, dedicated to healing the whole person, that's been our trademark for the past 30 years and for years to come. McKee Medical Center. Additional NoCo health-care facilities mean 200 more listings in directory

A letter from Co-publishers Chris Wood and Jeff Nuttall

Medical Center of the Rockies opened in Loveland earlier this year to great fanfare. Its black-tie debut represented just the latest in a string of hospital expansions in Northern Colorado, with hundreds of millions of dollars spent on facilities such as Longmont United Hospital, McKee Medical Center in Loveland, North Colorado Medical Center in Greeley, Poudre Valley Hospital in Fort Collins and — in a brand-new facility — Platte Valley Medical Center in Brighton.

These expansions demonstrate the — OK, we'll say it — health of the medical industry in NoCo. Residents today have more choice than ever, with quality facilities that in some cases feel more like hotels than health-care establishments.

And they have more clinics from which to choose, as hospitals set up family-practice locations in small towns such as Eaton, Firestone, Johnstown, Wellington and others.

All of these changes are reflected in this, the latest edition of Northern Colorado MD, the only comprehensive directory of medical facilities and practitioners in the region. The 2007 directory includes about 1,700 medical facilities and an equal number of practitioners — 3,400 contacts in all, up from 3,200 last year.

As always, we've divided the directory by category, to make it easy to find the facility or doctor of your choice. Categories range from alternative medicine to eye care, family practice to pediatrics. Northern Colorado MD is also indexed alphabetically.

Northern Colorado MD also includes articles of interest to consumers, health-care professionals and business owners from other industries.

We're grateful to many organizations and individuals for making publication of Northern Colorado MD possible each year. First and foremost, we thank our many advertisers. Their support has helped make this directory grow year by year.

We also thank our research director, Kathleen Chaballa, and our research assistant, Kate Hendrickson, who toiled for many hours to present the most-accurate data possible. Please contact Kathleen at kchaballa@ncbr.com to report any errors or omissions. (She also takes compliments.)

We're extremely grateful to the many individuals at Banner Health System, Poudre Valley Health System and other organizations that provided data for this directory.

Finally, we thank our sales force, especially Sandy Powell, our health-care account executive, who led this project.

Access the entire Northern Colorado MD database using our DataBank system at www.ncbr.com. The data can be downloaded in Microsoft Excel or tab-delimited formats, or it can be ordered on CD-ROM.

We hope you find this directory more useful than ever!

I, robot: The future is now in NoCo operating rooms

Robotic surgery units keep evolving, hospitals finding more benefits

By Steve Porter, sporter@ncbr.com

The words “robotic surgery” may conjure images of faceless robots wielding scalpels over a patient in the distant future.

But robotic surgery is available now, and it’s still your friendly human surgeon in charge of the cutting and sewing in the operating room, right here in Northern Colorado.

Robotic surgery had its entree into U.S. medicine on July 11, 2000, when the Food and Drug Administration approved the da Vinci Surgical System. It became the first robotic system used in American operating rooms.

Developed by Intuitive Surgical, a Sunnyvale, Calif.-based company, the $1 million-plus system allows a surgeon to get closer to the surgical site than human vision will permit and to work on a smaller, more precise scale than conventional surgery.

Other robotic systems besides the da Vinci system are now on the market or soon will be. The da Vinci system is now being used by Poudre Valley Hospital in Fort Collins and Medical Center of the Rockies in Loveland as well as Banner Health System’s North Colorado Medical Center in Greeley.

Michael Johnell, M.D., a surgeon specializing in bariatric surgery at NCMC, said he’s sold on the technology.

“At this point, almost all of (my surgery) is robotic,” he said. “I approach every case as a potential robotic case.”

More units, more specialties

PVH purchased its first robotic system in late 2004, according to spokesman Gary Kimsey, and installed a second robotic system, the da Vinci “S” system, on Sept. 11, 2006. The new “S” system is a technologically upgraded device that allows even more precise surgical movements.

When Medical Center of the Rockies opened in February it added a third robotic surgery unit to Poudre Valley Health System’s surgical services. Karen Martin, MCR’s director of operating rooms, said the MCR unit focuses on heart, lung and urology surgery, with OB-GYN surgery to be offered soon.

Kimsey said PVH is one of 20 hospitals in the nation and the only hospital in Colorado that performs robotic surgeries in four specialties: cardiology, gynecology, urology and general surgery. The number of surgeons who perform robotic procedures at PVH has grown to 17 since it was first pioneered by Michael Stanton of the Heart Center of the Rockies; Stephen Brutscher, Urology Center; and Warren James, Women's Clinic of Northern Colorado.

Kimsey said Northern Colorado Surgical Associates in Fort Collins also has surgeons trained to perform robotic surgery.

NCMC installed its da Vinci surgical system in December 2005, according to hospital spokesman Gene Haffner. NCMC surgeons are currently performing robotic surgeries for gynecological and prostate procedures and for gastric bypass and bariatric surgery. Haffner said he expects the number of medical procedures using robotic surgery at NCMC will increase.

"Banner Health System (Phoenix-based owner of NCMC and McKee Medical Center in Loveland) has invested in five da Vinci systems for five hospitals in the last year and a half, so there's a commitment on behalf of Banner Health to this kind of surgery," he said.

Patients pleased

Patients operated on with the new technology say they are pleased with the results. Robin Smith of Fort Collins, a nurse at PVH, had robotic surgery to remove fibroid tissue in her uterus. She said the procedure worked well because its minimally invasive aspect was perfect for her situation.

And once the camera was inserted, other unforeseen complications were found and remedied.

"There was no pain, no blood loss — it was magnificent, it was great!" she said. "I was able to go home in two days and back to work in 10 days after a full hysterectomy and was able to lift a 70-pound kid on the first day back. That's how I became a poster girl for this."

John Farrell, also from Fort Collins, had robotic heart

How robotic surgery works

The basic equipment consists of a viewing-and-control console and a surgical arm. A surgeon sits at the console usually positioned several feet away from the operating table.

The surgical unit, which includes three robotic arms, is positioned over the patient and controlled via remote control by the surgeon looking into a screen that magnifies the surgical area by 10 times what a human eye would see.

From the console, the surgeon makes three incisions about the size of a dime in the patient's abdomen or chest, depending on the surgery. Stainless steel rods, two of which are fitted with surgical instruments and one with a tiny 3-D video camera, are inserted through the incisions.

Joysticks at the console allow the surgeon to manipulate the surgical instruments as they perform more precise maneuvers than the steadiest of human hands.

The result is minimally invasive surgery that leaves less scarring, has less chance of developing infection, heals quicker and is less painful for the patient.

bypass surgery in April 2004. "It went great," he said. "They did it on April 7 and I went home two days later. I didn't expect it to be that fast, and it was almost pain-free."

After three weeks, Farrell got permission to go back to work as a security guard. And he's happy with the fact that, instead of a foot-long incision, his chest scar is only four inches long.

"If someone is a candidate for this, you bet I'd recommend it," he said.

Robotic surgery techniques also open the possibility of long-distance surgery, with the surgeon operating from the console and the patient treated at another hospital hooked up to the console by a remote connection.

It also reduces the likelihood of serious surgical complications, according to Johnell. "When dealing with minimally invasive surgery, particularly abdominal surgery, one of the most critical aspects post-operatively is a leak, which is one of the leading causes of death," he said. "Being able to do it with the highest degree of precision allows you to make the best (suture) connection you can."

Johnell said he believes most surgery is headed in the direction of robotic surgery.

"What I've recognized is that robotic surgery is just another aspect of minimally invasive surgery that I think this nation is moving toward," he said.

"Back in 1989 and 1990 when (minimally invasive laproscopic) surgery was first being performed, many doctors pooh-poohed it. Now, it's the standard of care and if you don't do it, you're not up to speed."

Nursing shortage really a teacher shortage

Nurse graduates limited by number of instructors

By Steve Porter, sporter@ncbr.com

Mimi Davidson's been on her journey to become a nurse for about five years now, and the end is still a couple of years away.

Davidson, 25, grew up in Loveland and one day decided her life's mission was to follow in the footsteps of her mother and grandmother and go into nursing.

"I said I'd never do it, but a lot of it was hearing about the (nursing) shortage and feeling it was something I could do because I wanted to help people," she said.

For the last several years, there's been ongoing national concern about a growing shortage of nurses as the huge baby boomer generation ages and people live longer than ever before. According to the federal Health Resources and Services Administration, the nation's nursing shortage is expected to grow to more than 1 million by 2020.

And a report last year from the American Hospital

MICHAEL D. WAILES, NORTHERN COLORADO BUSINESS REPORT

LEARNING BY DOING — Nurse Mimi Davidson checks the flow of oxygen in a patient room at McKee Medical Center in Loveland. Davidson earned her bachelor's degree in nursing at the University of Wyoming, and is still two years away from her master's.

Association showed U.S. hospitals already need about 118,000 registered nurses to fill vacant positions — and those positions keep getting harder to fill.

The American Association of Colleges of Nursing reported a 7.6 percent increase in entry-level baccalaureate programs in nursing in 2006. But HRSA said in its April 2006 report that "to meet the projected growth in demand for RN services, the U.S. must graduate approximately 90 percent more nurses" than it was turning out annually.

Decent wages, always in demand

Every nursing student's story is a little different, and Davidson's is no exception. After finally graduating earlier this year with a bachelor's of science and nursing degree from the University of Wyoming in Laramie, she still has two more years to go to get the master's degree that will ensure her success in her chosen field.

"I figured this is a way to earn a decent wage and always have a job," she said. "Usually, it's hard to find something that

"I've seen lots of people get frustrated and change their major."

— Mimi Davidson,
nursing student

you want to do and also be in demand.”

But it's been a long struggle to get as far as she has. Davidson said she applied to the University of Northern Colorado's nursing school but, with only a limited number of classroom slots available, her 3.85 GPA wasn't quite good enough.

“It's just been frustrating, especially at UNC with those 300 people and myself trying to get in,” she said. “They keep saying there's a nursing shortage but I wondered why am I being turned down with a 3.85 GPA. It just didn't make sense.”

Davidson turned to the University of Wyoming's nursing program where she got a break: She was one of 40 students accepted out of 200 applicants.

Davidson said she's seen other would-be nursing students simply give up and pursue another field. “I've seen lots of people who get frustrated and change their major,” she said. “You need money and you've got to do something.”

No simple answer

Debra Leners, interim director of the UNC nursing school who will take over the permanent directorship in June, said the reasons why there is a nursing shortage in Colorado are “multi-faceted” and no simple answer exists. First and foremost, she said, is a declining amount of state aid for instruction and programs.

“From the academic side of things, in the 1980s we were state-funded, in the '90s we were state-supported and since then we've just been located within the state,” she said. “There's been a serious decline in state support and increasing tuition to make up for it.”

But the bottom line is there's a limit on how many students UNC can teach in a given year, and that number is 108 — 72 from the school's traditional nursing program and 36 funded through a special partnership with Banner Health System's North Colorado Medical Center and Poudre Valley Hospital System.

Leners said the hospitals pay the 10-year-old program's costs and half of the students' tuition, with 18 graduates promised each year to each hospital. “When they graduate they're guaranteed a job at the hospital,” she said. “It's marvelous from the students' perspective because they don't have to go job hunting and they've gotten all their clinical experiences within the system they're committed to. It's been a wonderful partnership.”

Leners said one of the biggest reasons for the nursing shortage is a shortage of qualified nursing instructors. “We just can't increase our program without more faculty,” she said.

Northern Colorado nursing schools

Four public institutions in Colorado north of Denver offer an associate degree or equivalent for nursing students aiming toward a baccalaureate degree, which is available only at the University of Northern Colorado.

■ Aims Community College in Greeley, which is constructing a new 65,000-square-foot Allied Health and Sciences building that will be ready this fall

■ Front Range Community College, which has campuses in Fort Collins, Longmont, Boulder and Westminster

■ Morgan Community College in Fort Morgan with satellite centers in Bennett, Burlington, Limon, Wray and Yuma

■ Northeastern Junior College in Sterling

One reason is job burnout, Leners noted. “We've had an exodus of nurses from hospitals,” she said. “It's very hard work — intense, high-accountability work — often without the respect that it deserves.”

Another reason is that nurses earn more money than instructors. “There's no question that they can make better money as a nurse than as an instructor,” she said.

Instructor shortage

Leners acknowledges that, rather than a true nurse shortage, the nation is experiencing a nursing instructor shortage that's constricting the flow of new nurses into the field. She said that's resulted in increasing numbers of private, for-profit schools setting up to train nursing students.

But that's a development that worries her, however. “I have concerns about the for-profits because the bottom line is money,” she said. “And we have to compete with them for clinical placements.”

Even with all the hospitals in Larimer and Weld counties — NCMC, McKee, PVH and now Medical Center of the Rockies — Leners said there's still limited opportunities for nursing students to obtain clinical experiences under the wing of veteran nurses.

Leners said UNC would be able to teach more nurses with a significant injection of new funding — at least $1 million — but money alone isn't the answer, at least not at UNC.

“If you go to a strict business model, it's more about the bottom line than a quality education,” she said. “You don't just want to be pumping people out, to be a degree mill.”

Leners said she's not sure what the solution is for the nursing shortage. “We're looking for ways to deliver nursing education more efficiently, but we need new models,” she said. “There's got to be a more efficient and better way to do it.”

Small businesses + big premiums = less health insurance

Employees left without coverage or paying larger share

By Steve Porter, sporter@ncbr.com

Let's say you've just been hired for a new job at a small company. In your eagerness and excitement, you forgot to ask one thing: What kind of health-care coverage is offered?

You may be jolted into a state of shock when the answer is, "Sorry, we can't afford to offer health-care coverage for our employees."

More and more in recent years, small businesses are either not offering health-care coverage to their workers or they're passing along an increasing share of the insurance premiums, a situation that removes even more workers from the ranks of the insured because they can't afford those always-rising costs.

Small group health insurance premiums increased an average 84 percent between 1996 and 2002 in both Colorado and the nation, according to a March 2005 report by the Colorado Health Institute. The number of small businesses offering health insurance to their employees had stabilized at around 45 percent, the report showed, although the percentage of employees enrolling in employer-sponsored insurance plans dropped by 12 percent since 2000. A 2006 report estimated that the 45 percent figure had dropped to only 40 percent of small employers offering insurance.

Certainly, the rising cost of insurance coverage is a primary reason why employers often don't offer coverage and why employees don't enroll. A 2006 report by the Association of Health Insurance Advisors on Health Insurance: Overview and Economic Impact in the States, found the average total annual premium for an employee-only policy in a small business (50 or fewer employees) was $4,344, while the annual average cost of a family policy was $11,400 — almost $1,000 a month.

And that's a burn for the employee of a small business, especially when the employer starts paying a shrinking share of the premium.

"What's happening is the employer is paying less, so more and more employees have (coverage) available but are not taking advantage of it," said Jim Sampson, an insurance broker with Flood & Peterson Insurance in Fort Collins.

What are the alternatives?

So what are the alternatives for an employee — with or without dependents — whose employer doesn't offer coverage?

"If an employer doesn't offer coverage, the traditional venue is to go to individual coverage," said Terry Reams, another local Flood & Peterson broker. "There's plenty of outlets for that, either through a broker or going directly to the company."

And if you're young and healthy, you might actually do better obtaining your insurance policy outside of your employer's plan. "The reality is, if you're young and healthy you'll get your best deal by getting an individual health product," Reams said. "You need to look at your options. The employer option is more convenient, you can get payroll deduction, and most people just don't think to go outside of that."

If you're not young and healthy and work for a low income, you may be able to apply for coverage through some publicly sponsored programs such as CoverColorado, which is aimed at helping people with expensive medical conditions;

“Seventy-five percent of people who don’t have health insurance are in a family where somebody is working.”

— Colorado Rep. John Kefalas,
D-Fort Collins

Colorado Health Plan, otherwise known as Medicaid, available to children, working and non-working parents and pregnant women who are under certain federal poverty level requirements; and Child Health Plan Plus, which is again subject to federal poverty requirements and only applies to those 18 and younger.

Help coming?

So is there help on the horizon for small businesses and their employees?

The short answer is: Maybe.

A 24-member panel called the “208 Blue Ribbon Commission for Healthcare Reform” has been studying how Coloradans might obtain better access to health insurance and is expected to issue a final report on its conclusions in the fall. It’s expected that the best of these findings will become bills in the state legislature in 2008.

State Rep. John Kefalas, D-Fort Collins, said he has high hopes for the commission. “The governor’s behind it and there’s quite a cross-section of individuals on it,” he said. “Their basic task is to look at proposals that look at increasing access trying ultimately to get universal coverage while reducing costs.”

So while most are waiting to hear from the 208 Commission, Kefalas, a member of the House Health and Human Services Committee, said some health coverage legislation was adopted in the just-ended 2007 session, including Senate Bill 1, known as the “Colorado Cares Prescription Drug Program.” The bill was signed by Gov. Bill Ritter on Feb. 5 and goes into effect Sept. 1. It sets up a discount drug program for people who meet federal poverty requirements, in this case, a family of four earning $60,000 or less.

“That’s an example of where it can definitely help working families that don’t have insurance,” Kefalas said. “Seventy-five percent of people who don’t have health insurance are in a family where somebody is working.”

Gov. Ritter, in his first year of a four-year term, has declared his intention to make accessible and affordable health insurance a top priority of his administration.

“My long-term vision is to establish a Colorado Health Plan that provides every Coloradan with access to some basic form of health insurance and health care by 2010,” Ritter said in his State of the State speech delivered Jan. 11. “I look forward to solving this crisis with the legislature and the new 208 Health Commission.”

And there may even be hope for a national universal coverage-style plan as has already been adopted by Massachusetts. Such plans are being advanced by several presidential candidates, including former U.S. Senator John Edwards and current Senators Hillary Clinton and Barack Obama.

Clinical trials good for patients, good for medical science

Latest cutting-edge research available locally

By Jessica Centers, news@ncbr.com

When JoAnn Lovins was hired as Poudre Valley Hospital's director of oncology services, she'd already worked at various National Cancer Institute centers. She had seen how drugs go from Phase I clinical trials to becoming a standard of care.

She worked to increase staff and build the resources that would help the Fort Collins hospital bring in the latest, innovative treatments. "I'm very passionate about people being able to access [the latest treatments] locally," she said. "We have these trials right here. You don't have to go out of town."

Today, in Northern Colorado, most patients — especially those with cancer — don't have to go to New York or Atlanta or even Denver to get the most advanced treatment. Both PVH and North Colorado Medical Center in Greeley have dedicated extensive effort and resources to providing patients with the latest national trials and experimental drugs.

At the same time, researchers with Colorado State University and area bioscience firms are initiating their own trials to create the drugs and treatments that might cure future patients.

"Cancer research is critically important because how we base what we think is the best care for patients today is based on the trials of months past," said Julianne Fritz, director of oncology services at NCMC. "It's a moving target."

By participating in research, Fritz says NCMC is not only offering patients the latest trends and technologies, but participating in the greater body of knowledge that will improve cancer care for the nation and world.

NCMC has been involved in active cancer research since June 1988 and has been revising and expanding the program ever since. The hospital receives access to National Cancer Institute trials through its affiliation with the Colorado Cancer Research Program in Denver. NCMC currently has 68 clinical trials open in medical oncology as well as radiation and surgical oncology.

Each trial different

While there are some patients who hear about a clinical trial or new drug and contact the hospital to see if it's available, most patients are diagnosed into research programs through a screening process. Three NCMC oncology research nurses work with doctors to review every newly diagnosed patient to see if he or she would be eligible for any clinical trial. The enrollment process then involves an in-depth evaluation and patient-education process; it is still up to the patient to consent to receiving the treatment offered.

Fritz said every trial is structured differently. "Some of them know what drugs they're getting. Some of them are in blinded studies. They're getting two drugs, but one drug may be an investigational drug or placebo."

At the same time, a cancer committee is constantly working with physicians to determine which clinical trials it makes sense for NCMC to open. The hospital will open trials for the cancers most prevalent among its patients. "It's not always a benefit to our community to open a trial for a rare cancer," Fritz said. "We offer clinical trials for almost every type of cancer but more are open for major cancers: breast, prostate, and colon."

The hospital also has multiple trials for melanoma, head and neck cancers and lymphoma, which Fritz said is more prevalent in Northern Colorado than other places in the United States.

"We try not to open competing studies," she said. "If two studies are fairly similar, we'll make a decision as to which one would be a priority to open here." Those types of judgments are being considered weekly, in tumor boards.

High percentage participate

PVH also offers clinical trials through the National Cancer Institute and tries to make its portfolio of trials reflect the kinds of patients it sees. At any given time, there are about 50 to 60 trials open — 11 are currently open for breast cancer alone.

One popular breast cancer trial has been a new form of radiation therapy that lets women come in for treatment twice a day for five consecutive days instead of the standard six weeks of radiation.

“A lot of our women in rural areas were really excited about that because they could be done in a week instead of six,” Lovins said.

Women who join the study then still have a 50/50 chance of being in the one-week radiation group, or having to do the full six weeks. “The minimum you’re going to get is the standard of care,” Lovins said.

PVH currently has 49 oncology patients enrolled in trials, which is about 8 percent of the hospital’s cancer patients. Nationwide, Lovins said, about 4 percent of cancer patients are enrolled in clinical trials.

The hospital has a robust staff of five research nurses who make sure the latest trials get opened there. PVH also received a grant from the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation last year to increase the number of breast cancer patients in medical research studies. Hospitals can’t use persuasion techniques to get people to sign on for research, but it can offer assistance like gas money to patients who say they want to join a trial, but don’t know if they can afford the cost of transportation.

PVH and NCMC also participate in some prevention trials through the National Cancer Institute, like the Tamoxifen trial for women at high risk of developing breast cancer.

Local hospitals rarely participate in the earliest stages of research, investigator-initiated trials.

“Most of the time, those are done at National Cancer Institute centers where one of the primary missions of that institution is research,” Lovins said. “Our primary mission is care of patients.”

Early stage research

Even getting a drug or treatment to a clinical trial is a rigorous process that can take years or even decades. Fort Collins startup InViragen is licensing the technology for a new vaccine from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention after the initial years of study had already been completed. InViragen, created in 2005, is planning to start a Phase I clinical trial in 2008 for a vaccine for dengue fever, said CEO Dan Stinchcomb.

Dengue or “bonebreak” fever is a problem in subtropical areas around the world. It affects 2 billion people, with roughly 50 million to 100 million cases seen each year and about a half million fatalities. Those are the most serious

Different types of trials

There are three kinds of clinical trials, all being conducted in Northern Colorado, either by local hospitals or university or bioscience researchers.

- National trials that come out of the National Cancer Institute are shared with collective groups of doctors around the country to get those treatments out to communities.
- Pharmaceutical trials, sponsored by the pharmaceutical companies, are also national in scope.
- Investigator-initiated trials in which a new treatment or drug is tried on a small group by a single researcher or institution at the early stages of development.

SOURCE: ASSOCIATION OF HEALTH INSURANCE ADVISORS, 2006 HEALTH INSURANCE: OVERVIEW AND ECONOMIC IMPACT IN THE STATES

cases, which result in a vascular leak syndrome resembling the Ebola virus.

The InViragen trial will involve about 30 to 40 individuals who will be divided into groups of 10. “We’re looking at safety, making sure it doesn’t cause any adverse reactions,” said Stinchcomb. “Then we’ll progress to Phase IB and Phase II studies.”

He anticipates that all the trials will be done in other parts of the world, where the disease is prevalent.

InViragen currently has six employees but is looking to double that before the trial starts. Shantha Biotechnic in India is manufacturing the vaccine for the trial.

Colorado State University also has many independent researchers leading clinical trials, or working to get a new drug or treatment to the clinical trial stage. Tracy Nelson in the Department of Health and Exercise Science is now conducting a trial among men and women over 50 at risk for diabetes, studying the effect of flaxseed oil, fish oil and olive oil on cardiovascular risk factors. Randomized into one of the three groups, participants take the oil in capsule form for eight weeks.

Meanwhile, CSU researchers like Douglas Ishii — who thinks he may have discovered a cure for Alzheimer’s — work to get their ideas to the clinical trial stage. Researchers that make a discovery in the lab try to then patent their findings and create small biotech companies to attract investors. In Ishii’s case, the CSU Research Foundation helped him apply for patents and he then created a company, Aurogen.

Developing a drug can cost as much as half a billion dollars, and the larger pharmaceutical companies don’t usually step in until a Phase I trial has shown a drug to be safe in humans.

Insurance Glossary

Prepared by Health District of Northern Larimer County

Glossary of Terms

Business Group of One (BG1) — Classification of sole proprietors (or a sole employee of an organization or domestic employee working more than 24 hours) for the purpose of purchasing policies in the small business market.

COBRA — Allows employees to retain their employer-based health insurance coverage up to 18 months after employment termination at up to 105 percent of policy cost (a provision of the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985). Available to businesses of 20 or more (there are state continuation laws that cover smaller groups).

Co-insurance — Patient pays a fixed percentage of medical bills, typically 20 percent. Generally associated with indemnity plans (PPOs).

Consumer-driven health coverage — See Health Savings Accounts.

Co-payments — Flat, per-visit fee paid by patient. General associated with HMO plans.

Deductibles — Patient pays the first part of medical bill(s) up to a defined point at which point co-insurance applies.

Defined Benefit/Defined Contribution Plans — Employers have traditionally purchased a specific set of benefits for their employees (defined benefit plans). With rising premiums, some employers are now giving employees a choice of plans with varied coverage, co-payments, deductibles and costs and contributing a set amount to the employee's policy (defined contribution).

Fee for service — The common provider reimbursement method prior to managed care (provider receives fee for each service provided).

Health Savings Accounts — HSA allow individuals to set aside tax-deductible savings to pay for medical bills. Federal law requires that HSAs be associated with qualifying catastrophic policies.

Managed Care — A plan that requires (HMO) or incents (PPO) people to use a network of providers (unlike an indemnity plan which typically allows beneficiaries to visit any provider). Can be a health maintenance organization (HMO), a preferred provider organization (PPO) or a point of service (POS) plan.

Network Adequacy — Colorado law requires that carriers maintain a sufficient network of providers to assure that covered benefits are reasonably accessible to covered persons.

Portability — The ability of a currently insured person (or insured within last 90 days) to continue health insurance coverage without being subject to pre-existing conditions exclusions. In Colorado, the following rules apply to exclusions:

Group insurance — may exclude pre-existing for 6 months if no prior coverage (not maternity)

Individual — may exclude pre-existing for 12 months or permanently if attached to policy when written (as a rider)

Rating

Community rating — Everyone in a particular area is charged the same rate

Experience rating — Rating based on claims experience or health status

Modified community rating — Variation on community rating with limited adjustments for age, geographic location and family composition allowed under Colorado law

Rate banding — Rate variation (within limits) based on health status or other factors

Safety Net Providers — Health-care providers that give service regardless of ability to pay (typically hospitals, community health centers and clinics)

Self-Funded Insurance — In self-funded insurance, employers assume the risk (all or part) of insuring their employees. An insurance company or other third-party administrator generally administers these plans. These plans are exempt from state insurance laws. From an employer's perspective, self-funding allows:

- Avoidance of administrative charges
- Exemption from state mandated coverage
- Exemption from state premium taxes
- Companies with employees in multiple states to offer the same plan to every employee

Insurance Status Affects Health

- The uninsured have more difficulty accessing the health care system, are more likely to postpone or delay care and are less likely to receive important preventive care services.
- The uninsured have higher rates of preventable hospitalization, receive lower quality care and experience more adverse health outcomes, including higher death rates.

Why Insure for Health?

Health insurance:

- Covers unforeseeable catastrophic health events (unpredictable for the insured; predictable for the insurer)
- Reduces the financial vulnerability of individuals and groups by spreading the risk
- Finances the health-care "system"

A Brief History of the American Health Insurance System

According to the Access Project, most countries use insurance to finance health care, but the United States is unusual in that it relies primarily on a voluntary, employment-based system instead of mandatory social insurance. The system began, in part, during the Depression as a prepayment program to bolster ailing hospitals and eventually physician practices.

Insurance became employment-based with the wage and price controls imposed during WWII. With wage freezes, employers used health insurance to lure workers into unfilled positions. After the war, unions continued the fight for health insurance coverage and the practice grew with the passage of federal tax policies allowing businesses to claim premiums as business expenses and employees to receive insurance as a tax-free benefit.

Problems with the American System of Insuring for Health

- Insurance isolates consumers from the real costs of health care (moral hazard).
- Avoiding risk is profitable for carriers (underwriting).
- People want insurance coverage when they're sick (adverse selection).
- Commercial insurance carrier overhead varies from 10-30 percent compared to less than 5 percent for Medicare.
- Decisions made by health-care providers are influenced by carrier coverage and reimbursement, consumer demand and litigation avoidance.
- Large groups can negotiate better rates than small groups.
- Many people have problems accessing and affording health insurance in our current system, especially:
 - Small businesses and the self-employed,
 - Part-time and contract workers,
 - Low/moderate income individuals.

Who Governs the Market?

Government is involved in regulating:

1. Access (help buyers into the market)
2. Solvency (keep sellers in the market)
3. Stability (make sure there will be a market)
4. Transparency (show what's in the market)
5. Standards (define what can be sold)
6. Pools (define who sells to whom)

About a third of insured Coloradans have policies governed by the Division of Insurance, part of the Colorado Division of Regulatory Agencies. The policies of the other two-thirds of insured Coloradans are exempt from state regulation because they are enrolled in Medicaid, Medicare, CHP, federal employee plans or in a self-funded plan. (ERISA – the federal Employment Retirement Income Security Act – exempts self-funded plans from state law.)

The following federal laws do govern all health coverage:

- HMO Act 1973
- ERISA 1974
- OBRA 1990 (Medigap)
- COBRA
- HIPAA 1996
- Mental health parity laws (1996 and 1998)
- Minimum maternity stays and breast reconstruction for post-mastectomy patients

Sleep.

It shouldn't be hard to do.

Are you one of the millions of Americans experiencing sleep issues? Now you can determine - and work on - the cause.

If you have trouble falling asleep or returning to sleep once you awaken in the night, the cause could be more serious than you think. Sleep apnea, insomnia, snoring, and other sleep disorders affect millions of Americans and may cause serious health issues beyond simply being tired. A sleep study can answer questions beyond what your doctor alone can tell you.

"Caring for the whole person"

We take your future to heart.

*Heart Center of the Rockies patient
Shirley Farrier*

Shirley is grateful for the capable and thoughtful care she receives from the physicians and staff at Heart Center of the Rockies.

Good heart health is essential to overall good health.

Here at Heart Center of the Rockies, we've been helping people achieve optimum heart health since 1978. Over the years we've grown from a small Fort Collins clinic to a 20-physician practice that sees more than 21,000 patients like Shirley every year.

Heart Center of the Rockies is now providing advanced cardiac care at Medical Center of the Rockies, the new hospital in Loveland.

The Imaging Center

It's not just an imaging center. It's a choice.

We are open 7:30 am to 8:00 pm Monday–Friday, & Saturday mornings

Our services include:

- X-Rays • CT • Virtual Colonography • Ultrasound
- MRI • MR/CT Cardiac • MR/CT Angiography

Since 2000, Harmony Imaging Center has provided the most comprehensive, highest quality medical imaging in the Fort Collins area. Now we are able to bring this same high standard to our new location next to Medical Center of the Rockies, in Loveland.

With a new location comes a new name. Harmony Imaging Center is now the Imaging Center at Harmony while the new Loveland facility is the Imaging Center at Centerra. Both are equipped with the latest technology and staffed by the same excellent technologists and radiologists you've come to trust.

Your patients will receive the most technologically advanced imaging care available, scheduled at times that fit their busy lifestyles.

▶ FINDING UNKNOWN HEALTH PROBLEMS EARLY SAVES LIVES.

The earlier a health problem is detected, the better chance there is for a cure. Since 1976, Advanced Medical Imaging Consultants (AMIC) has helped doctors and their patients pinpoint unknown health problems using the most advanced medical imaging exams available. Our team includes over 20 board-certified radiologists, each of whom has completed subspecialty fellowship training. This high level of expertise ensures that our patients' diagnoses are thorough and accurate. Ask your doctor about AMIC today, or call us for a free information package.

Please join us in welcoming the newest member of the Poudre Valley Health System family. Medical Center of the Rockies, our new hospital at the corner of I-25 and Highway 34 in Loveland, offers the same world-class, compassionate care you've come to expect from Poudre Valley Hospital and all our facilities. Medical Center of the Rockies is a full-service hospital with the region's most advanced cardiac and trauma care.

We welcome our neighbors from around the region and invite you to take a tour! Please stop by the information desk in our lobby and pick up a hospital map.
