The ER team quickly eased Brenton's fear so he could get back to not showing any.

Our game plan is ER care within 30 minutes for our patients. Take Brenton for example. Last year was his first season playing tackle football. He was hit really hard during practice and later complained he had a bad headache and was lethargic. Brenton and his parents were scared, but the quick emergency care he received at McKee Medical Center made them feel a lot better. He was able to see a doctor in only 20 minutes because of McKee's streamlined ER that's zoned to treat the needs of each patient based on the severity of their medical problem. Our highly skilled team took the time to calm Brenton's fear, while running the required tests that eventually cleared him to get back in the game. McKee Medical Center. Remarkable health care inspired by you.

Growing population requires air transport options

AirLife Denver, NCME share medical airspace over southwest Weld

By Luanne Kadlub, news@ncbr.com

The friendly skies in Northern Colorado are busier now with the addition of two new medical transport helicopters in southwestern Weld County operated by two different health systems.

On the surface it appears ripe for dueling services but all involved said the numbers of missed emergency calls support the need for quick transport of trauma and accident patients.

Jana Williams, program director of AirLife Denver, said HealthONE, which operates several hospitals and medical clinics in the Denver area, began looking at the number of calls missed in Northern Colorado because of unavailable resources. In 2006, AirLife Denver, which also has helicopters in Lonetree and Aurora, was unable to respond to 100 such calls, with another 300 calls missed by other air medical programs in the area, she said.

HealthONE began plotting those calls on a map. The growing population and increasing medical calls along the northern Interstate 25 corridor made it “pretty easy to justify to expand when we looked at the geographical area where patients are clumped.”

AirLife Denver began flying in February from its base at the Frederick-Firestone Fire Station No. 2 just off I-25.

A month later, North Colorado Med Evac, formerly AirLife of Greeley, began flying its second medical helicopter out of the Erie Municipal Airport a mere 12 miles away.

Williams said HealthOne and North Colorado Medical Center worked collaboratively in pursuing their respective expansion plans: “It makes sense that we picked the same area. That’s where the documented need is.”

Rick Sutton, CEO at NCMC, said, “Keep in mind that with trauma situations, time is of the essence. The population

COURTESY AIRLIFE DENVER

WHEN HELP IS NEEDED — Northern Colorado now has two airborne medical transportation services ready to make emergency calls – AirLife Denver and North Colorado Med Evac.

there is growing every single day; there’s an increased need for service every single day.”

Both services busy

Williams said both services are busy. “There is enough volume to support them and enough for patients. We’re averaging one patient a day, which is what we planned for. Generally speaking, if you do 10 calls a month with a helicopter, you’re doing well. You grow into 30 or 40 calls a month.”

AirLife Denver’s three helicopters go on a total of about 2,400 flights annually.

Dan Beckle, emergency medical technician and flight nurse with NCME for 18 years, said the Greeley-based air service averages 660 to 720 flights annually. In March, Greeley flew 29 flights while NCME’s Erie-based copter had 21; and in April, Greeley went on 42 while Erie flew 20.

NCME flies within a radius of 250 to 300 miles, allowing it to cover all of northeastern Colorado, western Nebraska and southern Wyoming.

"We've served all of the hospitals in that area," said Gene Haffner, director of community relations at NCMC.

AirLife Denver's helicopters fly within a 150-mile radius of their respective bases, Williams said. Jets based at Centennial Airport are used for longer trips. AirLife covers an eight-state region, routinely bringing in patients from Wyoming, Nebraska and Kansas.

Best nearest facility

Which gets back to that nagging question of "competition." Which medical air service gets the call and which health center gets the patient?

The closest available helicopter is the one that gets the call, Williams said, a situation mandated by state medical rules. "We all tend to work together. If it's AirLife Denver, and if there's a closer hospital (than HealthOne), we'll send that helicopter there. It's the right thing to do."

Haffner said which hospital a patient is taken to can also depend on the level of trauma.

"The decision as to where to take the patient is made in the best interest of the patient and standard operating procedures of air transport. We take them to the closest center that can provide services they need at that time for their condition."

Medical flight teams can also influence where a patient is taken, Beckle said. Cardiac patients often are best served if taken to hospitals with Cardiac Alert Programs, which allows them to go straight from the helicopter to a catheter lab where intervention begins immediately. It might mean an additional seven minutes, he said, but it would be in the best interest of the patient.

And when a patient needs to be transferred from one hospital to another, that decision is made by the attending physician.

Lori McDonald, director of trauma services at Medical Center of the Rockies, said Poudre Valley Health System uses any of the helicopter services available, including Air Link out of Scottsbluff, Neb., and Wyoming Life Line.

"We have pretty good relationships established. With NCME, we've used them for years. They have protocols in place and don't overfly a hospital to go to another. That works for us," she said.

McDonald said PVHS has weighed the pros and cons of having its own helicopter. "There's a lot of literature out there about overutilization of helicopters. In a lot of metro areas, it's like every hospital has its own helicopter service and launches at times when it's not in the best interest of the patient," she explained.

Haffner noted, "Right now, residents of the Front Range and Northern Colorado are fortunate to have alternatives and resources available for transport. In the very near future, the needs are adequately covered by AirLife Denver and the expansion of our program. In the future, depending on population growth, trauma and transfer, there could be a need for additional aircraft. Right now, we're adequately covered."

Drug discount programs can lower prescription prices

Cards, vouchers, other assistance available in NoCo

By Jessica Centers, news@ncbr.com

With so many discounts out there to help people afford the soaring cost of prescription drugs, navigating the options can be the hardest part.

Northern Colorado has an abundance of resources to help consumers figure out exactly what's going to save them the most money. While the most generous programs are designed to help low-income families, several free discounts can help anyone without prescription drug coverage keep a little extra money in their pockets.

Diane Hewlett, a pharmacist at Columbine Drug in Loveland, has a hard time keeping track of all the available discount cards, coupons, vouchers and assistance programs, so she makes a point of referring people to the McKee Prescription Assistance Program, which counsels people individually.

Bobbi Sutton, who heads the assistance program, says she tries to use a combination of resources to help people save money on prescriptions. Often, the $4 generic drugs available at places like Wal-Mart, Target and King Soopers are a good option, but generics aren't available for all prescriptions. Behavioral health and seizure medications, for example, can be very expensive. But most of the major drug companies offer assistance programs that will provide free drugs to low-income patients.

"We do the forms, look at the guidelines, and apply on patients' behalf," Sutton explained.

When consumers don't meet the qualifications for an assistance program or the drug they need doesn't fall under such a program, discount cards can help reduce the cost. There are several different discount cards provided by the large drug companies, some of which are free and some that require an annual fee. In Weld and Larimer counties, agencies make discount cards available free to anyone without prescription drug coverage, regardless of income.

Discounts for the uninsured

United Way of Weld County has for three years been distributing discount drug cards provided by Membership Services Corp. The FamilyWize Prescription Cards, which save consumers an average of 43 percent or about $20 for each prescription, have been used by more than 2,300 people.

“What they’re doing is giving you the same discount you would get if you had insurance,” explained Sandie Cantrell of United Way, who is leading the effort to distribute the cards. Like McKee, the United Way has trained specialists who can help those who call the county’s 211 service find the prescription programs available to them.

The cards are also available to people who have maxed out their prescription drug coverage, or who need a particular drug that is not covered by their insurance.

“They’ve been sending us cards for about three years, but in the past we just gave them to partnering agencies,” Cantrell says. “After doing some research, we found it was such a valuable program that our executive director assigned that task to me, to make sure I get the cards distributed. I’ve contacted schools and clinics and doctors and chambers of commerce. We felt it was a great way for small business people who can’t provide benefits to at least provide these cards.”

More recently, the Larimer County Medical Society unveiled its Physician’s Rx Care discount card available and other health products and services, like hearing and vision products.

To know exactly how much they can save, consumers can go online and enter the name of their specific medication, at www.physiciansrxcare.com.

Larimer County government also recently announced it will be making a similar card, paid for with its dues to the National Association of Counties, available for free to consumers.

Not so much savings on brand names

Pharmacists, however, say the discount cards don't help that much when it comes to brand-name drugs.

Mary Hastings, a pharmacist at Clinic Pharmacy in Greeley, says most of the discount cards she sees save consumers about 5 percent or 10 percent, which doesn't make prescriptions that cost $100 to $250 affordable.

Clinic Pharmacy has a generic policy, meaning they fill every prescription with a generic equivalent unless a doctor requests brands only. On newer drugs, when generics are not available, Hastings has found that the drug companies often offer vouchers or coupons that can save her customers money.

Sometimes such vouchers offer the drug free the first time to get customers to try it, but they may also offer an extended discount. When such coupons are available, the drug companies supply them to pharmacies and doctors' offices, so they are readily available to patients.

Vicki Einhellig, an owner and pharmacist with Good Day Pharmacy, said there have been fewer discount drug cards available since the Medicare Part D drug-coverage program began in 2006.

She said the new cards, like those available through the Larimer County Medical Society, just take a percentage off the retail price, with no contribution from the drug companies. Therefore, the cards do save consumers some money on the brand-name drugs, but not a significant amount. Einhellig says pharmacies like Good Day are willing to accept the cards because, with the rising price of drugs, the alternative is people not getting their prescriptions filled at all.

She said she also tries to work with customers to make sure they're not taking more drugs than they need, like two that essentially do the same thing, and she points out the generic options when available.

Medical professionals hone skills on almost real patients

McKee adds sim-lab for training in safe, stress-free settings

*By Paige Ingram
news@ncbr.com*

New technology in Northern Colorado will help medical practitioners simulate before they operate.

By the end of 2009 McKee Medical Center in Loveland will house a 3,000-square-foot education and training site, allowing physicians, nurses and other health-care professionals to hone their skills on lifelike mannequins prior to putting scalpel or scope to skin.

The training mannequins come in adult, pediatric and mother-baby versions, complete with real anatomy, physiology and pharmacology. During practice sessions a trainer operates a computer program that makes them breathe and talk in response to the practitioner. Students learn and perfect skills like inserting tubes, drawing blood, delivering babies and performing surgeries.

“Simulation is an effective solution to provide a safe environment where nurses can practice, gain competence and build confidence and ultimately improve patient care,” said Julie Firman, McKee’s chief nursing officer. She said the addition of the simulation lab will help to attract new nursing and medical school graduates, as well as keep sharp the skills of those currently employed.

The simulation idea comes from Banner Health, the Phoenix-based parent company of McKee, which has installed the system in 11 hospitals in seven states, making it one of the largest in the country.

“Undeniably the future of medical education and improvement in patient care lies in simulation training and experiential learning for health-care providers,” said Mark Smith, M.D., system director for Simulation and Innovation at Banner. “In providing this simulation and learning center for the western region, McKee has taken a huge step forward in its commitment to quality patient care at Banner Health facilities.”

The future of medical education

The new Allied Health and Sciences Building at Aims Community College that opened last fall is designed to simulate a real hospital setting with state-of-the-art technology in laboratories, classrooms, offices and common areas. Cutting-edge laboratories simulate real-life working environments, such as an emergency room, X-ray labs and the back of an ambulance. The labs are also equipped with robotic patient simulators that can be programmed to react like real patients in real emergency situations.

The 68,000-square-foot facility serves students taking nursing, surgical technology, radiological technology, emergency medical services, medical assisting, chemistry, biology, physics and anatomy and physiology classes.

SOURCE: AIMS COMMUNITY COLLEGE

Improved results

Hospitals that have employed simulation training in the past are seeing markedly improved results. A study showed that surgeons trained with virtual reality simulators, like those scheduled for McKee, perform procedures 30 percent faster when they return to real-life scenarios, and were six times less likely to make surgical errors, said Kristin Truman, western region director of simulation and education.

“That means that simulation trains surgeons to be both faster and to make significantly fewer mistakes,” she said.

The mannequins will be used in Emergency, Surgical, Critical Care, Obstetrics and Medical environments, said Betty Patterson, public relations director at McKee. These scenarios can also merge for training exercises, as they often do in real life in hospitals. Training also will be designed for individual tasks, ranging from repeat to rare procedures.

The simulation system requires no new buildings, but rather will be located in a vacant portion of the existing hospital. Construction to get the space in order is expected to begin later this year and finish by end of 2009.

In addition to the mannequin-equipped training bays, the new site will include a debriefing room and conference rooms with teleconferencing capabilities, adding to the educational component.

The project is estimated to cost about $1 million. The McKee Medical Center Foundation kicked off a capital campaign for the center by providing the initial $250,000. Once the facility is up and running Banner Health will cover $500,000 of the annual operating expenses.

REPORT

Glossary of Terms

Business Group of One (BG1) — Classification of sole proprietors (or a sole employee of an organization or domestic employee working more than 24 hours) for the purpose of purchasing policies in the small business market.

COBRA — Allows employees to retain their employer-based health insurance coverage up to 18 months after employment termination at up to 105 percent of policy cost (a provision of the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985). Available to businesses of 20 or more (there are state continuation laws that cover smaller groups).

Co-insurance — Patient pays a fixed percentage of medical bills, typically 20 percent. Generally associated with indemnity plans (PPOs).

Consumer Driven health coverage — See Health Savings Accounts.

Co-payments — Flat, per-visit fee paid by patient. Generally associated with HMO plans.

Deductibles — Patient pays the first part of medical bill(s) up to a defined point at which point co-insurance applies.

Defined Benefit/Defined Contribution Plans — Employers have traditionally purchased a specific set of benefits for their employees (defined benefit plans). With rising premiums, some employers are now giving employees a choice of plans with varied coverage, co-payments, deductibles and costs and contributing a set amount to the employee's policy (defined contribution).

Fee for service — The common provider reimbursement method prior to managed care (provider receives a fee for each service provided).

Health Savings Accounts — HSA allow individuals to set aside tax-deductible savings to pay for medical bills. Federal law requires that HSAs be associated with qualifying catastrophic policies.

Managed Care — A plan that requires (HMO) or incents (PPO) people to use a network of providers (unlike an indemnity plan which typically allows beneficiaries to visit any provider). Can be a health maintenance organization (HMO), a preferred provider organization (PPO) or a point of service (POS) plan.

Network Adequacy — Colorado law requires that carriers maintain a sufficient network of providers to assure that covered benefits are reasonably accessible to covered persons.

Portability — The ability of a currently insured person (or insured within last 90 days) to continue health insurance coverage without being subject to pre-existing conditions exclusions. In Colorado, the following rules apply to exclusions:

- Group insurance — may exclude pre-existing for 6 months if no prior coverage (not maternity)
- Individual — may exclude pre-existing for 12 months or permanently if attached to policy when written (as a rider)

Rating

- Community rating — Everyone in a particular area is charged the same rate
- Experience rating — Rating based on claims experience or health status
- Modified community rating — Variation on community rating with limited adjustments for age, geographic location and family composition allowed under Colorado law
- Rate banding — Rate variation (within limits) based on health status or other factors

Safety Net Providers — Health-care providers that give service regardless of ability to pay (typically hospitals, community health centers and clinics)

Self-Funded Insurance — In self-funded insurance, employers assume the risk (all or part) of insuring their employees. An insurance company or other third-party administrator generally administers these plans. These plans are exempt from state insurance laws. From an employer's perspective, self-funding allows:

- Avoidance of administrative charges
- Exemption from state mandated coverage
- Exemption from state premium taxes
- Companies with employees in multiple states to offer the same plan to every employee

Where do most people get insurance coverage?

Insurance Status Affects Health

- The uninsured have more difficulty accessing the health care system, are more likely to postpone or delay care and are less likely to receive important preventive care services.
- The uninsured have higher rates of preventable hospitalization, receive lower quality care and experience more adverse health outcomes, including higher death rates.

Why Insure for Health?

Health insurance:

- Covers unforeseeable catastrophic health events (unpredictable for the insured; predictable for the insurer)
- Reduces the financial vulnerability of individuals and groups by spreading the risk
- Finances the health-care “system”

A Brief History of the American Health Insurance System

According to the Access Project, most countries use insurance to finance health care, but the United States is unusual in that it relies primarily on a voluntary, employment-based system instead of mandatory social insurance. The system began, in part, during the Depression as a prepayment program to bolster ailing hospitals and eventually physician practices.

Insurance became employment-based with the wage and price controls imposed during WWII. With wage freezes, employers used health insurance to lure workers into unfilled positions. After the war, unions continued the fight for health insurance coverage and the practice grew with the passage of federal tax policies allowing businesses to claim premiums as business expenses and employees to receive insurance as a tax-free benefit.

Problems with the American System of Insuring for Health

- Insurance isolates consumers from the real costs of health care (moral hazard).
- Avoiding risk is profitable for carriers (underwriting).
- People want insurance coverage when they’re sick (adverse selection).
- Commercial insurance carrier overhead varies from 10-30 percent compared to less than 5 percent for Medicare.
- Decisions made by health-care providers are influenced by carrier coverage and reimbursement, consumer demand and litigation avoidance.
- Large groups can negotiate better rates than small groups.
- Many people have problems accessing and affording health insurance in our current system, especially:
 - Small businesses and the self-employed,
 - Part-time and contract workers,
 - Low/moderate income individuals.

Who Governs the Market?

Government is involved in regulating:

1. Access (help buyers into the market)
2. Solvency (keep sellers in the market)
3. Stability (make sure there will be a market)
4. Transparency (show what’s in the market)
5. Standards (define what can be sold)
6. Pools (define who sells to whom)

About a third of insured Coloradans have policies governed by the Division of Insurance, part of the Colorado Division of Regulatory Agencies. The policies of the other two-thirds of insured Coloradans are exempt from state regulation because they are enrolled in Medicaid, Medicare, CHP, federal employee plans or in a self-funded plan. (ERISA – the federal Employment Retirement Income Security Act – exempts self-funded plans from state law.)

The following federal laws do govern all health coverage:

- HMO Act 1973
- ERISA 1974
- OBRA 1990 (Medigap)
- COBRA
- HIPAA 1996
- Mental health parity laws (1996 and 1998)
- Minimum maternity stays and breast reconstruction for post-mastectomy patients

Despite its high incidence among both men and women, heart disease is one of the most preventable of all diseases.

We encourage our patients and non-patients to maintain a healthy body weight, take in fewer calories, make wise food choices, and be more physically active. Not all heart disease risk factors are preventable, but developing healthier habits is your best defense.
