Kranzberg develops solid reputation over 30-year span

BY LAURA BISHOP

Business Report Correspondent

BOULDER – Whether it's kitchen cabinetry, a media center, an office reception area, bookcase or architectural woodwork, bki Woodworks offers its clients a custom option.

Celebrating its 30th year in business, Boulder-based bki Woodworks builds custom cabinetry for residential and commercial clients that fit specific design and style preferences. Bruce Kranzberg, bki's owner, said his company also installs countertops for a complete package.

OWNER, HIGH PLAINS CONSTRUCTION

"We can tailor the whole package of stuff," he said. The company will incorporate various materials like metal, glass and granite into the project. In addition to choosing the type of wood, the customer also makes a decision about the finish, which can include a paint option.

About 90 percent of Kranzberg's business goes to people who work in trades – contractors, architects and designers. Those people in turn help their clients narrow down an endless array of options on their project.

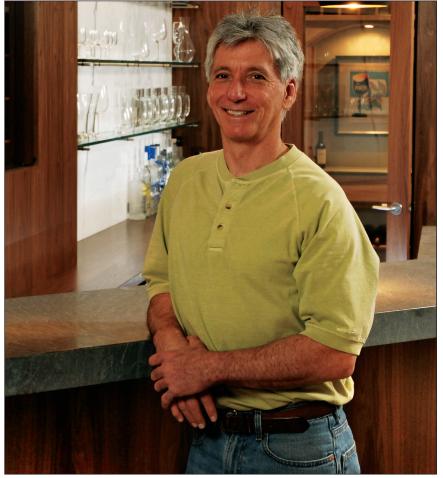

"Within the design profession, we do things differently than the average kitchen showroom," Kranzberg said. "We offer a complete service. We have an established clientele that comes to us for those reasons. We are always trying to expand our clientele. We add a lot of value to your project."

Kranzberg works with exotic veneers not found at an average store. At any one time, he is working on eight to 10 projects and completes 40 to 50 in a year. The price depends on a number of variables such as the type of wood, finish and project size. Most of the time, bki does the installation, however, on some projects the contractor is the installer.

"We warranty our work," Kranzberg said. "We take care of our clients."

The price can range from a $5,000 entertainment center to $250,000 for a whole house or $400,000 commercial project. In the last three years, average jobs have ranged from $20,000 to $50,000. Despite the custom work, Kranzberg said his prices are competitive. "Just because it's custom cabinetry, it doesn't have to be expensive," he said.

Leonard May, owner of May Yin Architecture in Boulder, said bki offers a custom design and a particular look for the same cost as a medium-grade cabinet in a showroom.

"We pretty much design everything and go custom for that reason," he said. "We are looking for a certain look. The pricing is competitive, and the customer service is good."

May presents the materials and design to clients and gives them a recommendation. The clients in turn tell him what they like, and the final choice is more of an evolution from his recommendations.

The majority of bki's clients are in Boulder and the Denver metro area, but bki has also worked with people in Steamboat Springs and Crested Butte. About half of the business is residential, and the other half is commercial. The commercial side includes dental offices, restaurants and office buildings. There are more remodel home projects than new ones on the residential side.

"We do pretty well in both marketplaces," Kranzberg said. "It helps us to work in both worlds. We are pretty competitive with the bigger shops because of the machinery we have."

Russ Coover, owner of High Plains Construction in Niwot, has worked with Kranzberg for 15 years. He uses bki for detail-oriented and difficult projects.

"He is the go-to guy for anything complicated," he said. "A lot of projects I get into require more detail and finish."

Coover works with bki on residential and commercial projects. He has used bki's services on a range of projects that have included cabinets for kitchens to bathroom vanities.

In addition to numerous homes, bki has its custom work in the Circle Point Corporate Center in Broomfield and Friends' School in Boulder. The library shelves, reception area, classrooms and lockers at Friends' School have bki's imprint. Kranzberg is also a green builder who offers eco-friendly cabinets. He is a certified green building professional and member of the Boulder Green Building Guild. The green cabinet options include no-added formaldehyde materials, recycled content materials and a finish that is better for the environment.

In addition to green building, a couple of the new trends include matching veneer pieces and building cabinets with a horizontal grain. Vertical wood grain patterns are more typical. Bamboo cabinets are becoming more popular. Maple and oak woods are still a mainstay, but a straighter oak grain pattern is available.

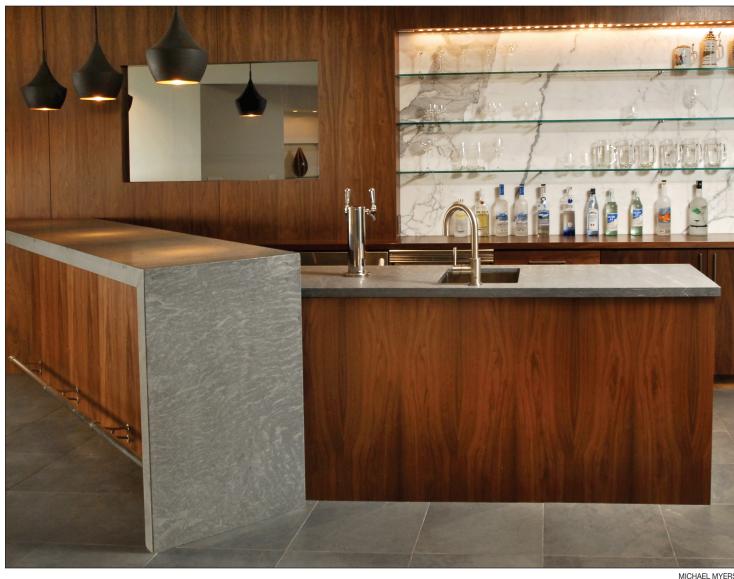

With a custom look, clients can't expect their cabinets delivered in a couple of days like they would from a showroom. Kranzberg said an average job might take eight to 10 weeks and longer for larger jobs.

"We work hard to build around anyone's schedule," he said. "We try hard to accommodate what our contractors need."

When Kranzberg began his business, he was the only employee and worked mostly in the residential area. He now has five employees.

"I bring a certain amount of enthusiasm after 30 years and hopefully people see that," he said. "I love what I do. I still have a lot of the same enthusiasm that I had back then. The quality has grown immensely. The knowledge is higher than when I started."

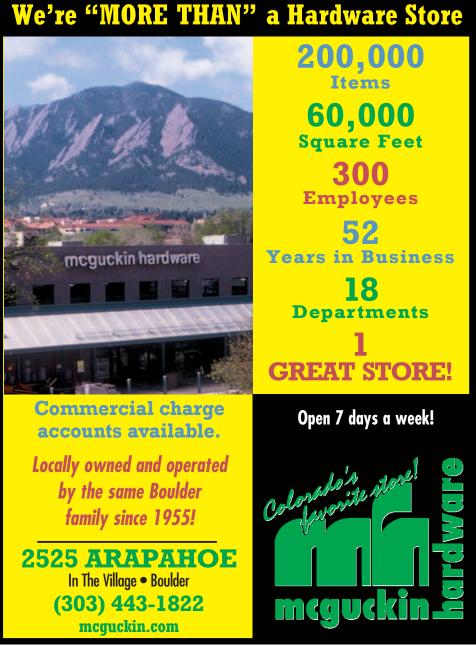

Kranzberg added the designs have changed dramatically over the years to fit the needs of people and different ways of entertaining. "We try to adapt and grow with that and keep up with the times."
