Open Heart Surgery

NOW WITHOUT THE OPEN HEART PART

At Boulder Community Hospital, we're committed to providing you top-notch medical care that includes the latest technologies and procedures. That's why our heart surgeons are the first in Colorado to offer minimally invasive heart valve surgery.

In traditional open heart repair of diseased valves, the surgeon makes a 10–12 inch incision and saws through the breastbone to get to the heart. The new Port Access Surgery approach requires only a small, 2–3 inch opening between the ribs.

Patients experience significantly less post-operative pain, much faster recovery and minimal scarring.

To learn more about Port Access Surgery and other cutting-edge medical procedures at Boulder Community Hospital, visit bch.org/innovations.

End of year will tell on health-care reform

PUBLISHER'S NOTEBOOK

Chris Wood

Christopher Wood,
Publisher

A year ago, most people in the country — make that the world — were abuzz about the collapsing economy, with many fearful about what 2009 would bring. Would they still have a job? Would their business survive?

Today, the economy seems to be on the mend, and the topic most-often debated is health-care reform. As I noted a year ago, 2009 was destined to be a year of health-care reform. As I write these words in the late fall, we still don't know what will be the outcome of this heated debate. Will we witness the most-dramatic overhaul of health care in the history of the republic, or will the efforts all have been for naught, as with previous attempts?

One thing remains clear: Few topics touch a nerve as much as health care.

And once again, the importance of a publication such as Boulder Valley MD is apparent. This sixth edition includes a look at trends in robotic surgery, as well as the toll of autism.

You'll also find thousands of listings of medical providers in Boulder and Broomfield counties, including medical facilities and individual practitioners.

Next year will find continuing coverage of the health-care sector in the pages of the Boulder County Business Report. Health-care reporter Ryan Dionne will continue his informative Medical File column, and health-care special sections will be published throughout the year. Additionally, our weekly Health Care electronic newsletter continues to gain in popularity.

As for Boulder Valley MD, I would be remiss in not thanking our research director, Beth Edwards, for her hard working assembling this data, and to our health-care account executive, Marlena Rich, for her wonderful sales effort.

Thanks also to our cover sponsors, Avista Adventist Hospital, Boulder Community Hospital, Exempla Good Samaritan Medical Center and Longmont United Hospital.

AUTISM'S TOLL

Nathan Sargent, 11, was diagnosed in 2003 when he was 4 years old with childhood disintegrative disorder, which falls into the autism spectrum disorder category. "He even knew it," said his mother, Bridget Sargent. "He asked me to put him back together."

Coping with this mysterious disorder challenges families

by Ryan Dionne rdionne@bcbr.com

With so many holes in the walls, so many heart-piercing glares, so many miles spent driving around the neighborhood and so many exhausting dietary changes, the Sargent family isn't alone.

It's part of life for millions of families who have a loved one with an autism spectrum disorder. Whether it's severe autism or a mild case of Aspergers syndrome, patients and families are throttled by it.

Bridget and Bob Sargent know firsthand what it's like to have a child with autism. Their 11-year-old son, Nathan, was diagnosed with childhood disintegrative disorder in 2003 when he was 4 years old.

"When they gave us that diagnosis, to me, it was the most-devastating point in my life," said Bob Sargent.

▶ AUTISM'S TOLL

Childhood disintegrative disorder is one of many disorders that fall into the autism spectrum disorder category. But unlike autism, disintegrative disorder develops when a child is 3 or 4 years old following a normal development.

"He even knew it," Bridget Sargent said. "He asked me to put him back together."

While the Sargents' scenario may be extreme, similar stories are common. For most people, the initial shock after diagnosis is debilitating. Hearing the words, "Your daughter has autism," can bring up a slew of emotions

"I think it's so hard to know what to do," said Angie Layton, president of the Autism Society of Boulder County.

The only thing many people know about autism is from a late 1980 movie starring Tom Cruise and Dustin Hoffman. And prior to the diagnosis, Bob Sargent was the same way.

"The only thing I knew about autism at the time was from 'Rain Man,'" he said.

While that movie gives a small glimpse into the world of autism, it paints only a fraction of the picture and doesn't provide parents with info on how to cope with it while providing care for their son or daughter.

Layton said parents and other caretakers need somewhere to turn; somewhere to get help finding a doctor; somewhere with a shoulder to cry on; somewhere that

experts yet to isolate exact cause

by Ryan Dionne rdionne@bcbr.com

BOULDER – Some people believe autism is overdiagnosed, while others feel it's more prevalent nowadays because it's easier to detect. Whatever the case, the verdict is out on what actually causes the disorder.

Just as many people argue that an autism spectrum disorder is caused by vaccinations, as those who argue it's genetic or environmental or dietary. And nobody knows who's right.

There isn't a known cause, which then makes it harder to find a treatment or cure.

"We do not know enough about this disease at all," said Angie Layton, president of the Autism Society of Boulder County.

There is no Michael J. Fox, no Lance

Armstrong, no Montel Williams who can openly publicize autism and share first-hand experiences. Because unlike Parkinson's disease, cancer and multiple sclerosis, autism is developed early in life — before a person hits celebrity status.

So parents and other caretakers are left to fend for themselves when it comes to autism awareness and trying to find a cure — even if it just works for their child.

For many kids with an autism spectrum disorder, their problems don't stem just from autism. Often, behavioral issues can be traced to other medical conditions like allergies or gastro-intestinal problems.

But if a nonverbal child with autism is constipated or has an upset stomach or stuffy nose, she often expresses it through inappropriate behavioral outbursts.

Many parents, including Bridget and Bob Sargent, whose 11-year-old son has an autism spectrum disorder, said taking care of the other medical problems helped with the outbursts.

Whether those medical problems are fixed via a gluten-free diet, laxatives or medications like blood pressure or Alzheimer's disease pills that are said to help autism symptoms, parents typically try anything — and won't stop until something works.

"They would fly to the moon and stand on their heads if they think it would help their kid," Layton said. Bridget Sargent agreed.

knows first-hand what autism is like. That somewhere is often a support group.

But even then, while there are some commonalities among autism spectrum disorder patients, each case is different.

"If you've met one child with autism, you've met one child with autism," Bob Sargent said.

Partially because there isn't a definitive cause, there's no cure for autism. And because each patient is so different, there's little that's known to help reduce symptoms for the majority of patients. Each person is left to experiment with what works best for his child, which can cost thousands of dollars and show minute results.

And because each child is different, the disorder is often hard to diagnose. Many of the signs are subtle and vary by patient.

Parents, educators, doctors and other professionals often see signs of autism before a

Here is a list of symptoms of autism spectrum disorders:

- Insistence on routine (doesn't like change)
- Inappropriate display of emotion for no apparent reason
- Resists physical touch
- Little or no eye contact
- No real fear of danger
- Impaired motor skills
- Unresponsive to verbal cues despite normal hearing tests
- Avoids social interaction
- Sustained odd play (often repetitive such as spinning objects)

child turns 3 years old. Sometimes it starts with speech or language impediments, but other times it starts with social seclusion, inappropriate emotional displays or a host of other indicators.

It may be hard to come to grips with the potential outcome, but the best thing for the child is to seek help early.

Theresa Wrangham, who co-founded the Autism Society of Boulder County, said someone told her doctors don't like to diagnose kids too early. But she wishes someone had done so with her daughter, Rachel, who wasn't diagnosed with an autism spectrum disorder until she was about 6 years old.

Wrangham said medical professionals don't do parents any favors by keeping quiet in hopes that the child developmentally "catches up."

Fortunately, Rachel "caught up" more than many other kids with an autism spectrum disorder. Now 19 years old, Rachel is a student at Front Range Community College hoping to someday find a job as a graphic designer.

From the outside, most people wouldn't know she gets anxious or overwhelmed easier than some of her peers; sometimes needs things explained to her in simpler terms or for the speaker to slow down; or was told at diagnosis that she'd likely never read or go to college.

But it was the help she received when she was diagnosed that played a role in how well she functions today.

SPEECH DEVICE COULD HELP screen children for autism

COURTESY LENA FOUNDATION

The LENA Autism Screen fits in specially designed clothing and records a child's daily sounds to detect tonal fluctuations that might suggest an autistic condition.

by Ryan Dionne rdionne@bcbr.com

BOULDER — It's widely known that the earlier a child is diagnosed with an autism spectrum disorder, the earlier they can receive therapy, which can make a huge difference in the child's development.

Boulder-based nonprofit, the LENA Foundation, is developing an early autism screening system that incorporates voice-related software with a voice recorder tucked into specially designed children's clothing.

Its autism screening system, dubbed the LENA Autism Screen, or LAS, was first released in September and is said to be 91 percent accurate for children between 1 and 2 years old.

"LAS is truly revolutionary because the analysis is based on the child's vocalizations in the natural home environment," Terry Paul, the foundation's president, said in a statement. "It will allow parents to quickly and inexpensively screen children as young as 24 months, enabling earlier interventions while reducing the anxiety of 'not knowing.'"

The system uses computer software to analyze a child's voice.

"It has been known for many years that children with ASD (autism spectrum disorders) have aberrations of voice and prosody (rhythm, stress and tone of speech)," according to the company.

Because people with autism typically don't have much tonal something isn't right, he should talk to a professional. As with many disorders, early intervention is crucial.

"The things that help the most, in my opinion, are the therapies, and those are important to start early," said Bob Sargent. "If you can get as much of those as possible as early as possible I think those are really big helps."

Therapies such as speech therapy and occupational therapy often help a child to improve his speech and language as well as his motor skills. That in turn helps him function as he grows. But Bob Sargent advised that parents shouldn't let anyone pressure them into doing something to their child with which they don't feel comfortable.

For some, like Nathan, autism spectrum disorders don't show much sign of progress. Nathan can ride his bike, he loves going for drives around the neighborhood — which calms his anxious nerves, he likes to swim, and he loves seeing how things work.

On a good day, he'll wake up smiling, he won't groan or throw a fit, and he may wrestle with his dad. But on a bad day, he may hit his head against the wall and make a few holes, be awake until 3 a.m., and be fussy and demanding.

Whether it's a good or bad day, it's undoubtedly tough on relationships between spouses, as well as between parents and their friends and the child and his friends.

Bridget Sargent said there is an 80 percent divorce rate among parents with a child who has autism. And friendships aren't easy, either. Both Bob and Bridget Sargent said they have lost friends since Nathan was diagnosed. Perhaps even more difficult to see, Nathan has lost friends, too.

"You find out really quick what people are about," Bridget Sargent said.

Through sharp glances when Nathan acts out or the barbecue invites that stop coming, it's hard to handle, the Sargents said. Plus, it's often hard for friends to visit the Sargent's home because Nathan often gets anxious if it's someone he doesn't know or trust.

"People with differences aren't people we need to be afraid of," Wrangham said. "They have the same needs everyone else does."

Wrangham and the Sargents have all found support in the autism community with people who share their same experiences.

"Nobody that I work with knows what I deal with," Bob Sargent said. "Even if they try they couldn't possibly have a clue because they're not living it."

And while they both, at times, wish Nathan didn't have autism, they love him just as much as their 6-year-old daughter who leads the life of "normal" kid.

It's the times when Nathan is happy, when he tells Bob and Bridget that he loves them and when he smiles that the couple, and millions like them, confirm that the hardships are worth it.

That's a feeling shared by most parents.

fluctuation when speaking, also known as aberration or flat affect, by analyzing a child's voice for conversation-correct intonation and normal voice fluctuation, the software can reportedly help determine whether a child has an autism spectrum disorder.

To record the child's speech in a nonclinical setting, the foundation uses an unobtrusive digital recorder placed in specially designed clothes.

The recorder is placed in a strategically positioned pocket made from a fabric that minimizes sound noise. And to help ensure consistency and accuracy of the screening, the pocket is positioned a specific distance from the child's mouth.

The child wears the clothes around his or her home while the recorder collects up to 16 hours of high-quality audio.

The approach was developed after studying all-day recordings of children with and without autism spectrum disorders.

According to the foundation, the average age a child is diagnosed with a spectrum disorder is 5.7 years old. With its early screening system, the foundation hopes it will help doctors, educators, parents and other professionals diagnose children at a younger age.

Da Vinci notes

California-based Intuitive Surgical Inc., the maker of the da Vinci Surgical System, makes initial sales of the da Vinci Surgical System, sells instruments and accessories for use in performing surgical procedures and enters into service contracts with those who buy the system. The company is part of the Nasdaq 100 and S&P 400 mid-cap indices. Intuitive Surgical has installed more than 1,242 systems worldwide as of July 2009.

The FDA has cleared the da Vinci Surgical System for removing the prostate gland and surrounding tissue; reconstructing or revising the renal pelvis to drain and decompress a kidney; removing a kidney; removing all or part of a urinary bladder; removing a uterus; removing uterine fibroids; correcting the position of a vagina; repairing the mitral valve in the heart; closing an abnormal hole in the wall of the upper chambers of the heart; restoring the flow of blood through the arteries that supply blood to the heart; removing a gall bladder; treating acid reflux disease; bowel resection.

Technology provides surgeons with precise, less invasive tools

by Doug Storum dstorum@bcbr.com

The latest approach to minimally invasive surgery seems akin to a video game. A surgeon sits at a console several feet from the patient on an operating table, peers at a monitor showing a magnified high-resolution 3-D image of the surgical site, and then uses joysticklike controls to guide robotic arms holding miniature laparoscopic surgical instruments to remove a kidney.

The patient is hoping for less pain, less blood loss, less scarring — and most importantly — a quicker return to normal activities than if that kidney had been removed with conventional open surgery.

Boulder Community Hospital recently paid nearly $2 million for a piece of equipment — the da Vinci Surgical System — to give patients that option. The system replicates a surgeon's movements in real time. It cannot be programmed to move on its own. It is not able to make decisions, move or perform any surgical maneuver without the surgeon's direct control.

While Boulder Community Hospital can advertise it is the only surgical center in Boulder County with a da Vinci Surgical System, neighboring competitors Poudre Valley Hospital in Fort Collins, The North Medical Center in Greeley, and the Medical Center of the Rockies and McKee Medical Center in Loveland all have purchased the da Vinci system in the past five years.

A growing number of surgeons along the Front Range have invested their own time to become certified on the equipment — in essence — becoming RoboDocs.

The da Vinci has been cleared by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for use in urologic and gynecologic surgical procedures. The most common procedure performed with the da Vinci, according to the company, is the removal of the prostate gland, normally performed as a treatment for prostate cancer.

Obstetrics and gynecology specialist Dr. Lisa Lepine based

COURTESY INTUITIVE SURGICAL INC.

A surgeon sits at a da Vinci Surgical System console viewing a 3-D image of the surgical site and operates controls to manipulate robotic arms with surgical instruments attached. The system translates the surgeon's hand, wrist and finger movements into precise, real-time movements of surgical instruments inside the patient.

JONATHAN CASTNER

Obstetrics and gynecology specialist Dr. Lisa Lepine based in Boulder has performed about 80 procedures using the da Vinci Surgical System at Boulder Community Hospital and sees the benefits. "There is a learning curve," she said. "You lose that feel and touch and sense of pressure you have in conventional surgery, but using these small instruments with small incisions reduces trauma to surrounding tissue, and that's a good thing."

to offer patients a better result.

"A procedure that conventionally took 90 minutes can take up to three hours with all the added set-up and break-down time," Lepine said.

Whether or not a patient wants to undergo conventional open surgery, minimally invasive surgery using laparoscopy or opt for the robotics of the da Vinci Surgical System is a choice. They need a certified surgeon, but the cost is the same.

Procedures are billed by code numbers, and insurance companies reimburse hospitals and surgeons the same amount for a particular procedure regardless of how it is performed.

Longmont United Hospital, nestled between Boulder and Loveland hasn't purchased a robotic-assisted surgery system for a number of reasons, said Rebecca Herman, vice president of clinical/support services. She said the hospital provides forms of minimally invasive surgery with laparoscopic technology providing good outcomes.

"The robotics removes the surgeon from the patient, and there also are a limited number of procedures that are FDA-approved right now," she said.

She also said with the fixed reimbursement for procedures regardless of how they are performed, the cost of the system, and the amount and cost of training required of surgeons and staff doesn't make it financially viable.

She also points to studies that caution about safety issues with robot-assisted surgeries.

"And when you consider the already high cost of health care and duplication of services, we don't think now is the time to add equipment like this."

Doctors who want to use the da Vinci and put in more time before and after a procedure dialing in the robotic equipment make less money per procedure, but all believe the better outcomes for the patients are worth it.

"Having access to this type of technology is the epitome of a community effort," Clark said. "It took the separate groups of the hospital administration, hospital board, nursing staff and surgeons to embrace this in terms of time and money. ... I believe robotics right now is only touching the cusp of what it could be in the next 10 to 20 years."

in Boulder has performed about 80 procedures using the da Vinci and sees the benefits.

"There is a learning curve," she said. "You lose that feel and touch and sense of pressure you have in conventional surgery, but using these small instruments with small incisions reduces trauma to surrounding tissue, and that's a good thing."

Urologist Dr. Jim Clark has been a surgeon in Boulder for 22 years and performed his first robotic procedure in January this year. Since then he has performed about 25 and assisted on another 50. He believes the da Vinci is an improvement over laparoscopic surgery.

"The laparoscopic tools are 17-inches long and rigid, and the camera is two-dimensional. ... It's easier with the da Vinci. With conventional open surgery you see the site well, but with laparoscopy's 2-D camera you lose depth of field. But with the 3-D camera, you get that back," he said. "It's phenomenally better. The camera has a zoom-in capability."

Surgeons who choose to develop skills using advanced robotic systems spend a great deal of their own time training to master the "robotic" wrists that can rotate a full 360 degrees, giving a surgeon greater maneuverability than his own hands in very tight spaces.

Both Lepine and Clark took time off from their practices to attend training sessions provided by Intuitive Surgical, the maker of the da Vinci.

Clark said training included online courses about the da Vinci's parts and how they work; a day at Intuitive's lab in Santa Clara, Calif., four hours of manipulating the instruments, watching 25 hours of video of procedures and performing procedures under the careful watch of certified doctors.

Surgeons also spend longer set-up times calibrating and positioning the equipment as well as post-op procedures
