Walking the world

hikes to adventure

COURTESY WARD LUTHI

Company founder says people love nature, want to be challenged

BY STEVE PORTER

sporter@ncbr.com

FORT COLLINS — After 23 years and who-knows-how-many miles, Ward Luthi is still walking the world.

Luthi, 59, has what many might consider a dream job. Since 1987, he has been leading walking excursions across the planet with his business, Walking the World.

Luthi says he's part of the adventure travel industry, but his particular adventurers are in the 50-plus demographic. His clients are a little older and wiser than younger thrillseekers, generally have more disposable income, and are looking for something a little more laid back but still adventurous.

Luthi was lucky enough to be in Washington, D.C. in 1985 as part of the President Reagan's Commission on Outdoor Recreation.

"Our charge was to look at recreation for the next 25 years," he said. "We found that the 50-plus people wanted to do more outdoor recreation programs because the cruise ships and shuffleboard wasn't doing it anymore."

Luthi spotted a business opportunity: "I could see there was a huge niche market out there because these were people who had the time and the money."

And with the first wave of baby-boom retirees about to break, the pool of potential clients seemed almost infinite.

Luthi said his first excursions focused on the American West: New Mexico, the Grand Canyon in Arizona, and one of his personal favorites, the Canyonlands near Moab, Utah.

"Once we started gaining revenue we started adding Europe, which is still the major destination for adventure travel," he said.

PEOPLE NEED CHALLENGE

Luthi said those early excursions were a little sketchy. "Most people didn't want to camp," he said. "They wanted a bed and a shower and a drink every night."

But Luthi had another idea.

"My philosophy is we do best when we sit around a campfire at night and talk after exploring all day," he said.

That philosophy of roughing it a little bit and really being part of the culture and environment has infused his excursions over the last two decades.

"Intuitively, I think people want to go outside," he said. "I think we've lost some of our relationship with our bodies, about what they can do, and about getting out and exploring nature. We make it possible for (clients) to have an adventure they might otherwise never have alone."

Luthi said he subscribes to the Outward Bound philosophy of "graded levels of physical stress," in which participants are encouraged to go just a little further than they might on their own.

"We try to challenge people," he said. "It's not just walk two miles and go have a beer. We're not there to be hard-core, but I think it's the thing that challenges you that you remember."

Luthi said he remembers one particular excursion through the Canyonlands. He was leading the group toward a stone arch, but the path was not flat or easy. But with some gentle encouragement, they made it, and that made all the difference, he said.

"Once they reached that arch, that whole mental wall collapsed and then they're open to almost anything," he said. "They say, 'I wish my kids could see me now,' and they realize they don't have to sit on the sidelines and be bystanders. It's really heartwarming when you see it."

ADVENTURE, HEALTH AND FRIENDSHIP

Walking the World excursions now include trips to Costa Rica, to Tuscany in Italy, Spain, Kenya, France, Nepal, Croatia and to Maine for the fall colors.

Most of the baby boomers now retiring came of age in the 1960s and have a greater spirit of adventure than earlier generations. With 78 million or the 100 million Americans over the age of 50 born between 1946 and 1964, Luthi sees a vast potential market.

He said today's world walkers are more conscious of staying active for better health. "People are aware that they need to stay active and keep moving," he said. "But people aren't necessarily motivated by health; they're motivated by adventure."

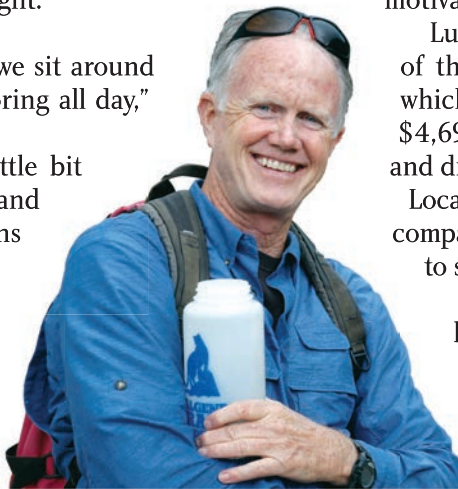

Luthi said he usually leads only about four of the 20 annual Walking the World tours, which can range in price from $1,495 to $4,695 depending on the length of the trip and distance from the United States.

Local guides are key to the success of the company, he said, but so is getting off the bus to see the real culture of a place.

"To me, I didn't want to do a bus tour but to be on our feet," Luthi said. "If you get to know the people, you get to know the country. If you just stay on the bus, you've shortchanged yourself."

Luthi said the possibility of making lifelong friendships is also part of the fun.

"Once the makeup is gone, you're a self-contained group and you have to rely on each other," he said. "If you have to help me get over a cliff, we start to learn who we are. We get to know each other the way that people who work 20 years together don't."

// I think it's the thing that challenges you that you remember. //

Get fit, get out

Staying in shape makes outdoor adventures fun

BY BETH POTTER

bpotter@bcbr.com

Glen Marshman, 55, considers himself a fitness buff, doing strength training or some other kind of exercise six days a week.

But these days, the former bodybuilder and owner of OneBoulderFitness said he likes to focus on “functional training” the most.

Three times a week, Marshman leads a group of clients through exercises where they do a wide variety of body movements. Members of the group squat down to pick up large “medicine balls,” then raise them over their heads, in one exercise, for example.

Such exercises can burn three times as many calories as “single-plane movement” like bike riding or running, Marshman said. Even though those exercises are still good for the heart and general fitness, they’re not necessarily helpful for folks who are looking to be more flexible, he said.

"I have changed my training protocols quite extensively over the last six or seven years," Marshman said. "I love strength training, but as I get older, things have changed. People don't move like they used to."

Even though baby boomers who exercise in the Boulder Valley may seem to be in better shape than the nation as a whole, everyone has gotten more sedentary, he said. Baby boomers are commonly thought of as people who were born between 1946 and 1964, making them 47 to 65 years old today.

POSTER BOY

Marshman could be called a poster boy for his generation. While the average age is 44 at OneBoulderFitness at 1800 Broadway, Marshman has changed all the fitness routines at the health club to fit in with the latest "functional training" trend.

"We have become a lot less active than we were," Marshman said. "We don't move like we used to, so you might get hurt when you do something."

Marshman has completely changed his personal fitness routine from the things he used to do when he was younger, including bench presses and other "single-plane" training.

"I consider myself super-fit," Marshman said. "I still do the fundamentals of strength training, but now I do a chest press with dumbbells, for example, or a lot of weights (switching) from hand to hand."

The same shift in training also has happened at RallySport Health and Fitness Club at 2727 29th St. in Boulder.

For example, "step" classes — where clients step up on a platform in a series of moves to music — used to be the most popular classes, said Erin Carson, general manager, fitness director and a certified strength and conditioning specialist at the club. Now, classes that incorporate more varied heart rates are the norm, Carson said.

"The body began to change and lose flexibility and mobility," Carson said. "Now we have to slow the classes down. We have to address flexibility and mobility issues."

Everything the club does these days, it does with an eye toward baby boomers, Carson said. That includes offering more individualized classes like the recent "Booty Bootcamp," where members pay an extra fee in addition to their normal membership fees for more personalized instruction.

Like OneBoulderFitness, RallySport also offers

// The body began to change and lose flexibility and mobility. Now we have to slow the classes down. We have to address flexibility and mobility issues. //

ERIN CARSON

General Manager,
RallySport Health and Fitness Club more "multiplane" exercises in its regular classes, now, too, Carson said.

Robert Brooks, owner of the Workout Studio, says he has learned to "go easy" on new clients who are older to make sure they don't get injured. He estimates that 30 percent or so of his clients are in the 55-plus age range.

"People said, 'I can't do this, it's too much. I'm too sore,' so now I know better," Brooks said.

PILATES BOOM

Pilates movements have boomed as the general population ages, said Amy Taylor Alpers, 52, who co-owns of The Pilates Center, 5500 wFlatiron Parkway, Suite 110, in Boulder, with sister Rachel, 58. She estimates that 60 percent of her clients are in the baby boomer age range.

"Maybe aerobics caused problems for some people," Alpers said about why so many of her clients are in their 50s and 60s these days. "They might have said, 'I can't keep doing that, it's hurting my body.' So they do something more therapeutic."

Body Dynamics at 2660 Canyon Blvd. has a special boot with springs called Kangoo Jumps that are great for boomers because they keep the load off of people's joints, said Wendy McClure, 54, the co-owner.

"They get addicted to it. It's like (working out in) water," McClure said.

Even the Curves health clubs for women are targeting baby boomers, said Marcha Spent, manager of 3127 28th St. location in Boulder.

Slightly more than 40 percent of the members are between the ages of 45 and 59, Spent said. Close to 60 percent of clients in the 30-minute circuit training/weight program are 60 or older.

Protect and grow your investments

Financial advisers offer tips to boomers wanting to retire

BY BETH POTTER

bpotter@bcbr.com

Your 401 (k) and your other assets aren't performing well enough to let you retire when you thought you would a couple of years ago?

In the current economy, millions of Americans have seen their investment portfolio drop during the recent, some say current, recession.

So now, how do you protect your investments and possibly grow them? Financial advisers in the Boulder Valley respond to that question with suggestions ranging from the simple to the complex.

Some folks have decided to continue working until they're 65 or 67, rather than retiring at 62. Others are scaling back on lavish lifestyles to sock more money away for their later years, area financial advisers said.

Don't forget the usual caveats — wealth doesn't grow overnight. And if something sounds too good to be true, it probably is.

As Russ C. Rauhauser, a principal at Cornerstone

Baby boomers, people between the ages of 47 and 65, are having to go back to the drawing board when it comes to finances and retirement.

Investment Advisors LLC in Boulder puts it, "If somebody had a magic bullet, it would be dispensed among everyone now, and there wouldn't be so many people in pain these days."

With those thoughts in mind, here are a few tips:

SAVE, SAVE, SAVE

Saving might seem like the obvious strategy, but it's surprising how many people don't think about how much money they need to save to have a certain amount of money every year when they retire.

Your own saving and spending is the one thing you can control when it comes to financial uncertainty, said Robert Pyle, owner of Diversified Asset Management Inc. in Boulder.

“Those are the retirement levers. If you save more, you can retire sooner,” Pyle said.

Once you’re focused on saving, it’s easier to look at the current stock market as an opportunity rather than a curse, Pyle pointed out. Roth IRAs and 401Ks are the way to go in terms of making sure you diversify your assets, too. Individual retirement accounts are the most common tax-deferred way for workers to save money.

“People feel better if they invest when the market is high, but if you’re in savings mode, you want to invest when the market is low,” Pyle said.

TUNE OUT ‘TALKING HEADS’

Financial advisers say they constantly remind their clients about the “big picture.”

“Doom and gloom sells way better than if you’re optimistic, so that’s what you’re going to hear on TV,” Rauhauser said. “People tend to panic, and you need a cool head.”

In addition, clients should not try to take more risk than they can afford now, just to try to catch up to where they were before, Rauhauser said.

So far in 2010, the stock market has performed reasonably well, Pyle said. Many clients with diversified portfolios over the last decade did OK, even though some large cap stocks took a beating, he said. Some assets returned more than 10 percent over the decade, for example, Pyle said.

CHECK OUT ANNUITIES

As clients get older, annuities get more attractive, said Paul Sussman, district manager at Waddell & Reed Inc.’s Boulder office. As a comparison, annuity interest rates are higher than straight certificates of deposit rates, for example, and taxes on them can be lower, Sussman said. Most annuity investments start at $10,000, he said. “They’re like a personal pension,” Sussman said. “If you want to make sure your money lasts whether you’re 80 or 120, we ask people to consider an annuity. I had a great-grandmother who lived to 106.”

Annuities also can work well for people who receive an inheritance that needs to be invested, Sussman said. Only the gains are taxed, creating a lower tax burden, he said. The traditional 401 (k) money is taxable once

PAUL SUSSMAN

Principal,
Cornerstone Investment Advisors LLC

the investor starts withdrawing it, he said.

And consider buying life insurance and long-term care insurance plans. If catastrophe strikes, and you or your spouse gets sick, insurance plans can be a lifesaver, Rauhauser said.

THE RETIREMENT JOB

Advisers also are suggesting that their clients work more years than they may have expected they would, even if they change jobs.

For example, Rauhauser said his sister is selling crafts at fairs and online in her retirement years after working in computer management at the University of Washington.

“We’re thinking about retirement in a different way,” Rauhauser said. “A lot of people have gotten into trouble leaving their previous careers without thinking about what they’re going to do next.”

Pyle said he has about $50 million under management; about 50 percent of his clients are baby boomers. In general terms, Pyle said he wants clients to be able to withdraw 4 percent of their assets per year when they retire. At that rate, if a client has a portfolio with $1 million in assets, he or she can withdraw $40,000 each year, and the amount should last for 30 years, Pyle said.

Cornerstone works with clients who have about $200,000 to invest, Rauhauser said. Waddell clients can start with as little as $2,500, Sussman said.

"It is my pleasure to have the opportunity to recommend the investment services of Chuck and Alicia. They have provided me greatly appreciated security and I rely on their judgment. Thank you Chuck for your guidance and your friendship."

IF YOU KNEW THERE WAS A TEST THAT COULD SAVE YOUR LIFE... WOULD YOU TAKE IT?

Know Your Risk:

- Are you at least 50 years or older?
- Are you of African-American or Ashkenazi Jewish heritage?
- Has a doctor ever told you that you have inflammatory bowel disease, ulcerative colitis, or Crohn's disease?
- Has one of your parents, or brother, sister, or child had colon cancer or colon polyps?
- Do you smoke or use other tobacco products?
- Are you physically inactive—not getting regular exercise?
- Do you often eat red meat?

If you answered yes to any of these questions, you are at increased risk for colon cancer.

FISH WHERE THE FISH ARE...

GOOD ADVICE FOR FISHING (AND ADVERTISING)

When you want to find fish, go where the fish are plentiful. The same principle holds true when you want to find business decision makers: go where they are plentiful.

That's where we come in. By providing in-depth, local business news and by forming solid ties with our community, we've developed unparalleled reader loyalty among the key business decision makers you want to reach. And, as a member of The Alliance, we can provide access to over 1.2 million business professionals in the U.S., Canada, Mexico, Puerto Rico and Australia.

Advertise where business decision makers are plentiful: contact us today.

ALZHEIMER'S CARE

PROUD RECIPIENT OF THE ALZHEIMER'S FOUNDATION OF AMERICA
EXCELLENCE IN CARE AWARD

At The Academy, we are devoted to creating exquisite environments for seniors. Both of our communities have one-of-a-kind ambiance and style. The Academy is a locally-owned, boutique retirement community in a spectacular setting in Boulder, Colorado. With only 54 residences and a resident-to-staff ratio of 1.5:1, our intimate community offers unparalleled personal services from a devoted staff attuned to your every need. We offer both leasing and condominium purchase options.

The Academy at Bella Vista has ten spacious suites with private baths and patios, and offers the same luxurious décor, superb cuisine and exceptional services and amenities that are the hallmark of The Academy. With a ratio of three caregivers to 10 residents, Bella Vista offers unparalleled individual care that is only possible in a small setting.
